EURO EVENTS KILLED OFF BY CORONAVIRUS

Swiss, French and Italians cancel car shows, but experts here frustrated with lack of advice

UK show organisers have spoken of their frustration over the lack of guidance being given about how to tackle the spread of Coronavirus. Organisers of UK events have said that they still expect their car shows to go ahead – even though Switzerland and France have banned indoor shows expecting four-figure visitor numbers – but that Health Secretary Matt

Hancock's refusal to 'rule anything out' has left them unclear about whether shows here are at risk. Show organiser, Mark Woodward, said: 'We have to be seen to do the right thing – if things change we will review the situation.' 'If the worst came to the worst we would suspend shows rather than cancel them.'

CMC's Bulldog spirit

Shropshire-based Classic Motor Cars (CMC) is to restore the only Aston Martin Bulldog ever built to working order after its owner decided to attempt something that the car never managed in period – reach 200mph.

CMC has assigned eight staff to strip and rebuild the car over an 18-month period and is working with the original Aston Martin engineers who created the car in the late Seventies.

CMC's managing director, Nigel Woodward, confirmed that getting the car running and driving again would need a combination of original and upgraded parts if it was to make the double ton and tour the world afterwards, as per the owner's wishes. The best the Bulldog managed to achieve in period was 191mph at MIRA in 1981.

He said: 'We want to put the car back to its original configuration but we may include modern components and technology to improve its reliability.'

'Overall, we want to keep the original engineering architecture and appearance of the car.'

Cooped-up Cooper comes to market

A 30,000-mile 1964 Mini Cooper packed with Sixties memorabilia is up for sale.

The 998cc model has been off the road for 40 years, and comes with Player's No 6 cigarette packets, Green Shield stamp books and even a Sixties newspaper in the rear pocket.

Vendor Pete Flanagan, from Glossop, said: 'It's a great project to restore. It was found in a garage in St Helens, Merseyside, and the fact that the garage was full of bric-a-brac has probably saved it from the moisture.'

Amazingly, the floor panel is still finished in its original factory Tartan Red but the car's next owner will need to invest in new panels. The Mini is being offered at £12,950.

Riley's path is finally clear

Classic dealer unearths rare Pathfinder after nearly 50 years' slumber

A rare 1956 Riley Pathfinder has been found in the garage where it has sat untouched for 47 years.

Bedfordshire-based RS Cars proprietor, Richard Shrive, who retrieved the car after a tip-off, said: 'It really is a one-off find. Once a seized brake had been dealt, with the car came out of the garage with no problems.'

Richard was told that the Riley's owner drove it into the garage in 1973 and never touched it again after he became ill.

The car comes with its original log book – a useful document given that its registration is not on the DVLA computer – and is ripe for restoration, although the engine is seized. Richard said: 'The chassis and floor pans are in good condition; both sills need replacing, but the interior is in excellent condition.'

Riley RM Club chairman, Judith Uttley, said: 'We are very pleased to hear that this car has been found. We very much hope that the new owner will join the club, and I'm sure that they would like to take advantage of our spares service.'

RS Cars is seeking offers around £5995.

CORONAVIRUS CANCELS BIG CLASSIC EVENTS

PC Resto Show to go ahead; UK organisers prepare for the worst

THE COVER STORY

The outbreak of coronavirus is steadily shelving car events across Europe and Asia – but, for the moment, UK events, including the Practical Classics Classic Car and Restoration Show on 27-29 March, are going ahead.

Show director, Lee Masters, said: 'There are no attendees to Classic Car and Restoration Show registered from China or Hong Kong. If any attendee has been to China or Hong Kong in the last 14 days, we cannot admit them.'

Retro Classics in Stuttgart went ahead as planned last week and there are currently no plans to cancel Techno-Classica Essen (25-29 March). In an official statement, the Head of the City of Essen's Department of Health, Peter Renzel, said: 'Neither Techno-Classica nor other events in our city would require cancellations at this time. The Techno-Classica will take place at Messe Essen on 25-29 March.'

Over the border in Switzerland, however, the 90th Geneva International Motor Show (GIMS) has been called off at short notice with many displays still under construction; classic car exhibits are always part of the show space and Morgan, which was planning to unveil a new car in the Swiss capital, will now launch it elsewhere. The closure of GIMS came after the Swiss Federal Council banned public and private events in Switzerland at which more than 1000 people would gather. This ban on events comes into immediate effect and will apply until 15 March at least.

GIMS Foundation Board chairman, Maurice Turrettini, said: 'This is a case of force majeure and a tremendous loss for the manufacturers who have invested massively in their presence in Geneva. However, we are convinced that they will understand.'

The country-wide cancellation has also killed off the annual Ice In St

Moritz event, which is popular with members of the air-cooled Porsche community.

Italian shows have also fallen by the wayside – but organisers of the Villa d'Este show on 24-25 April, who have moved the show to Villa la Massa in Florence, insisted that the move was to showcase its newly refurbished resort rather than because of any worries over the coronavirus issue.

All of the confirmed cases in the UK have been from people travelling back from infected areas; various tours from the UK into Asia have been cancelled, including the Rally Round Trans-Himalayan Adventure 2020. Rally director, Andrea Seed, said: 'This decision has not been made lightly. We cannot predict the outcome of the coronavirus but as always, the participants' safety is our paramount concern.'

Of late, UK shows have had weather, rather than coronavirus contingencies to worry about.

Organiser Classic Shows said that its plans were unaffected by either: 'Our first car show isn't until May; we only have two smaller autojumbles before then, so we aren't considering anything yet.'

The British Motor Museum at Gaydon and National Motor Museum at Beaulieu said that while they had contingency measures in place, they expected their shows to be unaffected by coronavirus because most begin during the traditional UK show season in May.

ALLEGRO SS RESCUED

TV star unearths rare Allegro with the help of Fifth Gear's Jonny Smith

Lazy Boy Garage's Tim Glover is to restore a one-owner 1974 Austin Allegro Sport Special after both he and Fifth Gear's Jonny Smith dragged it out of a Lincolnshire garage.

Tim told CCW that the car will take pride of place on the Allegro Owners' Club International's stand at the Practical Classics Classic Car and Restoration Show on 27-29 March and be displayed in 'as recovered' condition.

The Allegro, which Allegro Owners' Club International records suggest is one of eight SSs left, has been vandalised over the three decades that it has been sitting in storage, losing its special instrument binnacle, gear knob, centre console, SU carburettor and bonnet. The previous owner, who bought the car new, kept the log book and rare wood inset 'Quartic' steering wheel when he parked the car up after getting a works van.

Arch fan Tim's first car was an Allegro Series 3 and he currently owns another Allegro that was assembled in Malta from a completely knocked down kit. He said: 'It was in a garage 50 yards from my house – and I'd been looking for one for years.'

Friend and Fifth Gear presenter, Jonny Smith – another Allegro fan whose Series 1 'street sleeper' is powered by a Rover 827 engine – helped Tim to rescue the Allegro from the garage it had lived in since the early Eighties, documenting the find for his Car Pervert YouTube channel. Jonny said: 'It's spurred me on to get my Allegro finished.

I loved the idea of a car that's super-rare but no-one really cares about. The reaction to the video has been amazing – and from reading the comments online, it's been a great nostalgia trip; loads of people have Allegro memories.'

Tim is hoping to replace many of the missing parts out of the Owners' Club's parts stash but has also appealed for anyone with Allegro SS parts to get in touch. He said: 'People treated it as a bit of a free for all when it was stuck in the garage. Since moving it, I've got the engine to turn over, which is pretty remarkable considering that it had been left parked with one of its spark plugs out.

'It had been Ziebarted from new, so it's bad in some places but not others. It's never been welded, but I'll need some doors.

'I'd really like to preserve the vinyl seeing as it's spent 30-odd years out of the sun.'

Shelsley specials sought

Striking GN 'Wasp' is one of the 24 Shelsley Specials that are already accounted for.

Shelsley Walsh is appealing to owners worldwide in the hope of reuniting as many 'Shelsley specials' – cars built especially for tackling its historic 1000-yard hill climb – as possible for a special event later this year.

Forty five of the 117 cars built over the years with the express aim of achieving a class 'best in time' (BTD) have yet to be accounted for; the team at Shelsley would like to get as many of them together as possible in time for the Reg Phillips Meeting on 4 July.

Anyone with a Shelsley Special, regardless of condition, is urged to contact Amanda Palmer at the Midland Automobile Club.

MYTH BUSTER

Debunking the most common old wives' tales

VAUXHALL VIVA/ BEDFORD HA

1 IT'S BASICALLY AN OPEL KADETT A

The HA Viva may resemble its Opel Kadett A cousin, but although they share the same floor pan, they share little else. The two cars were individually developed under conditions of strict secrecy, and although it's likely that there was some collaboration between the two General Motors brands, they were both entirely separate projects, unlike later Opel/Vauxhall efforts.

2 THERE WAS NO ESTATE

While there was a factory-designed and built Kadett A estate, there was no equivalent Viva HA, adding more weight to them being very different vehicles. However, the Martin Walter Bedford Beagle estate conversion, using the HA van, was officially sanctioned and sold through Vauxhall/Bedford dealerships, so was to all intents and purposes the load-lugging Viva (until 1973, when it was supplanted by the estate Viva HC).

3 THE CHEVANNE REPLACED IT

Many sources have it that the HA van had a 20-year life until the Chevette-based Chevanne replaced it. Except the Chevanne, which was built from 1976 to 1984, didn't really supersede it at all – it wasn't a resounding success compared to the simple HA. The HA continued alongside it until 1983 and enjoyed rather more significant fleet sales.

4 POSTMAN PAT HAD A BEDFORD HA

Postman Pat's van is reputedly an HA – the Royal Mail was a huge user of the Bedfords. However, aside from general boxiness and round headlamps, the two seem to have very little in common. Influenced and inspired by, yes. Based on, less so. Richard Gunn

The first Viva was similar to the Kadett but not a badge-engineered variant.

Oldest Viva HA comes to market

Clubs say that the 1963 car is the earliest example that they know of

What is believed to be the oldest surviving Vauxhall Viva HA is for sale at Martin Howey Classics in North Yorkshire. Registered on 1 November, 1963, the Deluxe has covered 40,000 miles from new and is up for £5795.

It's one of the few surviving early cars with cloth seats; Vauxhall switched to vinyl after a fire at the Luton factory, where the Viva was produced prior to its move to Ellesmere Port in 1964.

Martin Howey, who acquired the car from a collector in Scotland who drove it just 25 miles in the past two years, said: 'Condition-wise it has to be seen to be believed.'

Vauxhall Viva Owners' Club chairman, Fred Dukes said: 'It's not a car I've seen and it's certainly interesting.' John Knight of the Viva Drivers Club said: 'This car is a really significant find. We don't know of an older example.'

'WE WILL BE CARRYING ON'

North Yorkshire classic dealership loses 25 cars to floods and suffers 'horrendous' damage

North Yorkshire Classic Car Centre in Snaith flooded on 25 February, costing the dealership at least 25 cars which couldn't be rescued.

The owner of a classic car dealership that has been inundated by flood water has vowed not to give up.

Chris Marlowe of the Yorkshire Classic Car Centre in Snaith had just two hours to attempt to move as many cars as possible out of harm's way last Tuesday.

A monumental effort from staff and volunteers saw between 50 and 60 classics saved from the flood, but Chris estimates that he has lost 25 cars, as well as facing a ruined dealership: 'We had so many cars to move in the space of two hours on the Tuesday dinner time. There was no chance. We had people wading through waist-deep water to help.'

Water levels rose so high that the showroom window was obscured from view. The rescued cars are now on driveways and in fields and garages. Cars moved to more secure storage on higher ground included an MGB GT V8, Austin A40 Farina, Jaguar XJ6, Renault Alpine GTA, Ford Fiesta XR2, Mercedes-Benz 280SE and a Volkswagen Golf Convertible.

Chris has to wait for the water to recede before finding out exactly which cars he hasn't managed to save, but he knows that the stock includes Daimlers and MGs. He said: 'I think it will be up to two weeks before we'll be able to get in.'

'All I know at this point is that the damage will be horrendous. Tools and equipment will all be gone – we'll just have to wait and see. Hopefully the cars might be salvageable; they needed some work doing to them anyway.'

Having started selling classics a year and a half ago after starting in modern cars, Chris said that the flood would not halt his ambition. He said: 'Older cars are so much more enjoyable. You are selling to enthusiasts who want to work on their cars and want to keep history alive.'

'I don't want to do anything else, so we will be carrying on.' Tom McCooey

Brooklands icon saved

The jewel of Brooklands Museum's collection, a record-breaking 1933 Napier-Railton responsible for the all-time track record at the circuit, had to be removed from the Surrey venue last week owing to fears for its safety.

Rain from Storm Dennis caused the nearby River Wey to burst its banks on 18 February, cancelling driving experiences at the adjacent Mercedes-Benz World and swamping its flood overflow defences; the museum was only able to open thanks to the efforts of its staff and volunteers.

The Napier-Railton, the fastest car to set a lap record at Brooklands before it was repurposed for wartime use, was returned to its display on 21 February.

The members' area, clubhouse and paddock near the finishing straight also flooded in 1968 and in 2013, before its flood defences were strengthened.

Top Gear (Peru special)

Any time, BBC iPlayer

In case you've missed the adverts, Top Gear is back for series 28. Despite a mixed reception from classic car enthusiasts, this episode – the Peru special – is a corker, with genuinely interesting classic content. It sees Chris Harris, Paddy McGuinness, and Freddie Flintoff go on a high-altitude mountainous adventure.

Freddie picks a VW Type 2, Paddy a Pontiac Trans Am that's been home-converted into a convertible and Chris Harris a Dodge Dart.

Yes, the three classics get treated brutally. Paddy's very rough Trans Am is damaged to the point where he has to replace it with an Oldsmobile Cutlass. Is it better to go out in a blaze of glory, or be towed to the scrappy in the sky? Murray Scullion

Do you know the whereabouts of Ian Davidson's stolen Rover P5B Coupé? It's painted Turquoise Blue with an Old English White roof.

'It's a very special car to me'

The owner of a stolen Rover P5B Coupé is appealing for information that might lead to its safe return.

Ian Davidson has owned his 1972 Rover for 39 years, having invested more than ten years and £20k in its restoration. It was taken from a locked garage in South Croydon in the early hours of 14 February.

Ian said: 'It is in superb condition. It's my only car and daily driver. It is mostly original.

'It is obviously an extremely special car to me.'

Anyone with sightings of the Rover should contact the Metropolitan Police on 0800 555 111, quoting crime reference number 3805267/20.

Jaguar D-type: The Story of XKD 526 £20

There's no denying the effort and research that's gone into chronicling the history of a single car. In this case, it's the racing and post-racing life of XKD 526, one of three D-types exported new to Australia. Period pictures and illustrations are joined by modern studio shots commissioned for the book. This is a very specialist title, with limited general appeal, but it really knows its stuff, and it merits shelf space if you're into Jaguar's racing history.

Bluebird Design Poster £93.80

The art team at Automobilit doesn't do things by halves – an entire digital model was made of Donald Campbell's famous Bluebird for the production of this new print, which has been initially released in a limited 403-piece run as part of the 'Collector's Editions' run, which feature gold pressed text. A 50x70cm poster on hefty 175g/m2 paper, the beautiful print will make for the perfect artwork for an office or garage wall for the speed freaks and automotive historians among us.

Let's see more love for 'The Flying Pig'

I am consumed with frustration and regret. Upon opening my latest issue of CCW (19 February) my attention was gripped when I saw the article on the Ford Zodiac MkIV looking for a worthy owner. Yes, I've heard the derogatory remarks about the 'Flying Pig' and how they're inferior to the MkIII, but cars such as this should be cherished even if only for their rarity. I owned a Zodiac MkIV saloon in about 1978, which I bought from a garage for £90. It had been left by someone who couldn't pay the repair bill, so I was in the process of getting it through its MoT when the engine failed. I sold it to a taxi driver for £25 and he put a diesel engine in it. I've regretted it ever since and I'm now 62. So, reading about the estate car in your 19 February edition attracting much interest from banger racers and such filled me with genuine sadness. My first impulse was to snap it up and give it the future that it deserves, but the simple fact of the matter is that I have nowhere to keep it.

I really do hope to read shortly that it has found a good home. They only exist once, after all. Keep up the good work on what I think is a cracking publication. Steve Pilkington, Bury, Lancashire

Oi... stop knocking the Galant!

With reference to Jon Burgess' £1000 Challenge on your Mitsubishi Galant (CCW, 19 February), may I make it clear that I do not doubt that he is an eminent correspondent and author in most aspects of motors/motoring and that he has accumulated a wealth of knowledge and experience of such things over the years. While enumerating the several faults that this car still exhibits since being purchased by CCW, I have to say that I feel that this was put across in such a negative way as to make the reading thereof very heavy weather. This is indeed an old, high-mileage vehicle that basically still does the business and deserves respect for still being around and looking good. Mr Burgess was essentially borrowing the car after all, and a little gratitude would not have come amiss. Or would he prefer to walk next time? Although hardly relevant, I have a particularly soft spot for this car because Mitsubishi fan Nigel Davis reckons that we should be kinder to our £900 Galant.

my bedroom TV is a 39-year-old Mitsubishi which was purchased new so that we could watch the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana in colour, having traded in our old black and white one against it. Needless to say that the picture quality is still excellent! Nigel Davis, Tiverton

Mystery motors identified

I found the photographs sent in by Martin McLaughlin (Your Letters, 5 February) fascinating and good fun to identify. Perhaps other readers might be able to send in more queries to make this a semi-regular feature in our favourite weekly read. The first picture is an Austin Seven RK type saloon registered in Leicester in March or April 1930. Next is a Trojan three-door drop tail tourer with solid tyres. This model was introduced in 1927, but the number plate is not readable. The next one is almost certainly a BSA motorcycle combination of approximately 1927 carrying a Leicester registration of about 1906, evidently transferred from an earlier vehicle. The final image is of a 1910 Calthorpe 12/14 tourer carrying a 1910 Salford registration. Calthorpe cars were made in Birmingham. Roger Armstrong, via email

HOW LONG HAVE YOU OWNED THE CAR?

I became the car's second owner on 25 May 2019. It was a bereavement purchase for £100. The first owner was a friend and I have known the car from new. It had done 35,925 miles at that point and has always been garaged. What a lucky find – ugly, but I love her! I've named her 'Maggie'. The car is currently insured for £600 and it's due for renewal in March. I would like advice on the value for this car, please. Also, it would be interesting to know how many of these Mazdas are still on record as surviving.

documents including the original bill of sale, Mazda sales brochure, all service records, past tax discs and MoT certificates – which confirm that the mileage is correct. The tool roll is unused and the box with the jack and wheelbrace remains unopened. The original radio/cassette player still works, the carpets are like new and the back seat looks like it's never been sat upon.

HAS IT BEEN MODIFIED?

The car is as bought when new with no modifications.

WHAT'S LEFT TO DO ON IT?

Nothing more at the moment. Since buying the car the only expenditure it has needed has been on an MoT (which it passed without issue), getting the wheels powder-coated, and having a cambelt service done, along with fitting a new water pump – just in case.

EVENT REPORT RACE RETRO, STONELEIGH PARK, WARWICKSHIRE, 21-23 FEBRUARY

PRIDE BEFORE A FALL

Tributes, prangs and plans for Bonneville were all revealed at Stoneleigh

The three-day spectacle of Race Retro wasn't without drama. While the headline attractions – 1994 WRC Rally Championship winner Didier Auriol on stage and track, commemorations of the late Norman Dewis' and Russell

Brookes' respective careers – drew crowds, live action on the rally course, organised by Rallying With Group B, brought more than 140 historic rally cars to Warwickshire. Sunday's rain made the mixed surface course even more challenging, however.

Rauno Aaltonen's old 1963 Monte Carlo Rally Morris Mini Cooper appeared at Race Retro driven by Kelvin Sparrowhawk. The final day proved hard going. 'It's a bit rough for a Mini,' Kelvin said, after the rough course that had been cut up by faster machines.

Salvage Hunters: Classic Cars presenters Drew Pritchard and Paul Cowland visited Race Retro's halls, too, and Wheeler Dealers Dream Car's Marc 'Elvis' Priestley was also interviewed on stage.

Richard Morley, Broking Director at Reis Motorsport Insurance, said:

'The show celebrates all that's great about the motorsport community and there is truly something for every enthusiast. It was our first year as headline sponsor and a fantastic way to kick start the season for us.' Jon Burgess

1972 FORD ESCORT RS1600 CUSTOM OFFERS OVER £65,000

Cosworth BDA-engined performance Escorts are rare and sought-after cars; their high purchase price and suitability for rallying meant only 1137 were built on the special Advanced Vehicle Operations line in Aveley, Essex. This Electric Blue example, built in December 1971 and registered April 1972, was subject to a nut-and-bolt rebuild by specialist ASM nine years ago. The AVO Owners' Club has also authenticated the car and its letter comes with the service history, which includes a photographic restoration record.

PUFF RUNS OUT OF MAGIC

Bron Burrell's ex-World Cup Rally Austin Maxi 1750, 'Puff the Magic Wagon' didn't escape the wet gravel and mud stage unscathed, suffering a minor prang.

On the gravel and mud section connecting the tarmac access roads of Race Retro, Bron moved over to let a faster car by – only to slide into a hay bale made solid by the morning rain. 'I've dented the car and my pride,' she said, 'but it can be repaired'.

After pulling the nearside wing off the wheel, Bron drove Puff to the Project Shop in Bicester to be fixed. 'I broke the bull bar – but the wing can be hammered out.'

WORLD'S FASTEST JENSEN

The team behind The World's Fastest Jensen, a Jensen CV8 modified for high-speed runs, unveiled ambitious plans to crack 200mph at the Bonneville Salt Flats this year.

Ian Northeast, Harry Smith, Andy Best and Pete Riley displayed their CV8 on the FBHVC stand, which has a stroked 8.2-litre turbocharged engine and a Tremec six-speed gearbox.

The car has already travelled to Bonneville once, for 2018's Speed Week, but only managed 150mph following transmission failure, falling short of the then 170mph target.

Ian says: 'We've added a turbo so we've have just shy of 1000hp. We've done a lot of aerodynamic work too, so this year we will be disappointed if we don't top 200mph.'

EVENT PREVIEW DRIVE-IT DAY, NATIONWIDE. SUNDAY, 26 APRIL

Are YOU ready for Drive-it Day?

How to join in the nation's biggest celebration of classics, no matter where you and your car are

If you're lamenting the poor weather that is keeping your classic in its garage or under its cover, now is the time to plan how you will join in the Federation of British Historic Vehicle Clubs' annual blowing away of the cobwebs day on Sunday 26 April.

Drive-it Day is all about getting in your classic and driving it, but rather than just taking it for a drive on your favourite road (which you should definitely do too), many classic owners choose to join up at countless events across the country to take a look at everyone else's classics, too.

There are meet-ups at classic car museums, tourist spots, pubs and airfields, so we've selected ten of our favourites. It's worth having a look at the Federation's website too, which has a UK-wide list of Drive-It Day events.

EVENT PREVIEW PRACTICAL CLASSICS CLASSIC CAR AND RESTORATION SHOW, NEC, BIRMINGHAM, 27-29 MARCH

Classic Car Loan Project Wolseley 1500 to restored during show

CLUB OF THE MONTH

Wolseley Register's resto to be used to highlight marque to classic fans

The Wolseley Register will be working on a 1500 for use in the Classic Car Loan Project at the Practical Classics Classic Car and Restoration Show, with Discovery.

The 1958 Mk1 was discovered in a warehouse in Devon in 2018, and other than vandal damage to one side, had survived well, complete with a rare Champagne Beige over Black factory paint job. Though structurally sound, the club has had to repair the sills damaged by the vandals and respray the body. Now fresh from the paint shop, the club will be fitting out the 1500 during the show and visitors will receive the car's first public appearance since its restoration, having last appeared as discovered at last year's show. The car will be handed over to Warren Grove, who will be loaned the car for 12 months, at the British Motor Museum on 11 April.

Press Liaison at the Wolseley Register, Andrew McAdam, says: 'No-one under 40 knows Wolseley, so we need to publicise the cars and draw attention to the youth element we do have. If we don't get involved, we'll get left behind. Our deputy chairman acquired this car just as we were discussing the Classic Car Loan Project and it seemed ideal, it's easy to drive and is a good starter classic.'

The club will also be displaying a completed Wolseley 1500 restoration, a 1938 Series 3 21hp saloon and a recently restored

BEFORE

"The Abarth is definitely more eager to please since using FTC; acceleration is better and the engine note is more 'throaty' than before. It's now quicker and more fun to drive, just like having a new car again. What impressed me most though is the economy! Would I recommend? YES, wholeheartedly." Heather, Dorset

In 1940s America, it was discovered the little tin-alloy pellets, used in the Hurricane fighters on the Russian front, would stop carbon deposits from forming in engines. For the motor manufacturers this was a problem. No carbon deposits meant greatly reduced engine wear, putting a big dent in the profits from component failure, repairs, replacement parts & ultimately new car sales. For the fuel additive companies, with their expensive repeat-use cleaners, the little pellets spelt complete disaster, because permanently clean engines, wouldn't need them.

This well-known phrase was one of several started to ensure the little pellets were ignored. It's still happening. For years, a powerful industry ensured the public were mis-lead about what fuel catalysts could actually do. So today, millions of cars, vans & lorries needlessly produce increasing amounts of CO, NOx & CO2 emissions, simply because engine deposits gradually ruin efficiency & clog-up exhaust systems. The VW scandal was a prime example, of a cunning attempt to hide the inefficiency & raised emissions that deposits always cause.

Engine deposits are the real cause of the excess traffic pollution which blights air quality in towns & cities worldwide. It's only carbon deposits that cause the 4x4s, vans & cars we see every day, to pump out those thick clouds of filthy smoke, as they pull away. Yet where fuel catalysts are used, engines remain permanently clean & efficient, which means that performance, fuel economy & emissions will remain practically the same as those of a brand-new engine.

"If they were that good the manufacturers would fit them"

The 80 year old secret the motor industry would really rather you didn't know

Fuel catalysts permanently & safely remove even the toughest, baked-on carbon deposits. This helps to restore engine efficiency, fuel economy & performance. It's the reason potential MOT failures can be returned to 'as new' emissions spec and the reason smoky, noisy old 4x4s, vans & cars are now running like new again. It's why DPF warning lights stay switched off, EGR valves don't play up & AdBlue usage is massively reduced. Permanently preventing carbon deposits saves drivers a small fortune.

The 20,000,000 plastic bottles of repeat-use fuel system cleaner, sold in the UK each year, are only a 'sticking-plaster' solution. With fuel catalysts, our excess traffic pollution would permanently disappear, but so would the sales of millions of plastic bottles of chemicals. One rather big reason the public are still being intentionally mis-lead, about what fuel catalysts actually do.

"The emissions dropped from 2.46 to 0.10 l/m just by using FTC" David Harris, Dorset

"No more black smoke, way better acceleration & restored fuel economy" Tim Jones, Yorkshire

"Economy has improved from 42/3 to 50mpg on short trips" Steve Foss, Guernsey

"It's astonishing that something so small can have such an effect" John Meggison, Co. Durham

Removes deposits

The more hidden carbon that's removed, the more noticeable the results in restored performance, fuel economy & emissions will be. In a new or very clean engine, where there's no carbon & no lost efficiency, FTC will simply stop deposits from forming.

Restores engine efficiency

The significant improvements reported by FTC customers, are always as a result of stubborn deposits & baked-on carbons having been removed from engines, fuel injectors, valves & vital sensors. Removing carbon deposits, restores lost performance, fuel economy & drastically reduces emissions.

Maintains engine efficiency

The FTC pellets are only added once because they're permanent, solid & non-sacrificial. It's the fuels reaction, against the surface of the FTC pellets, that removes & prevents engine deposits. The FTC pellets don't breakdown, dissolve or wear away & won't move around once in the fuel tank.

Permanent one-time treatment

You can't overdose with FTC. A larger size just means more pellets & more surface area. A 1.2 litre engine will use the FTC02K. A 2.0 litre engine can use either the FTC02K or go up to the FTC03K. For high performance cars or 4x4s just go up a size. FTC comes with full instructions. Order your FTCs now for FAST & FREE delivery within 2-3 working days.

Our tales from the driveway, garage and out on the open road

OUR CLASSICS

A TALE OF TWO TRAILERS

The Monza's maiden run was going oh so well – until it decided that it would rather be a kettle...

JOHN LAKEY
SERIAL MENDER

1984 OPEL MONZA GSE 3.6 IRMSCHER

Having found a clutch to handle the Irmscher engine's power, the next move was to fit it. So the Monza went back to my friend Graham Booty's workshop in Ipswich on a trailer so as not to damage the flywheel. I'm keen to work on my cars, but I knew that it was a job for a workshop with a proper ramp.

Graham and his son Ryan have been working on the car for three years now, so it's as much their project as it is mine; it was the obvious thing to do.

They are what you might call well practised in Monza clutches by now. The trick is to remove the gearbox from the bell housing first, then remove the bell housing, fit the new clutch and then build it back up in reverse. Trying to do it with the bell housing still attached gets you stuck; we know this from experience...

The other easy error to make with these cars is that the clutch plate fits both ways, but slips if you fit it back to front. As such, it's worth brushing up on your German (it has 'front' and 'back' written on it) to make sure that it is facing the right way.

The whole job took more than a day by the time the adjustments had been made, but we were rewarded with a car that now goes as fast as it sounds like it will, and does not slip its clutch at all.

Flushed with success, I decided to be brave and take the Monza to Liverpool for a Cambridge-Oxford Owners' Club event at The Griffin Trust Hooton Park Hangars, which are on the edge of the Ellesmere Port Vauxhall factory site. I was keen to use the Monza and it seemed an appropriate car to take there, even if it is a German-built Opel rather than a Vauxhall.

The run up to Liverpool, the first time that I'd driven it more than five miles, was a joy. The taller 3:15 differential means that it's quiet, smooth and (for a big car) relatively economical at motorway speeds. The new FB Recaros are superb and the smaller steering wheel works a treat, so I was chuffed that I'd taken the risk when we arrived at the Beatles' museum on Saturday lunchtime.

After four hours or so of Fab Four indulgence (it's well worth a visit), I drove to the Mersey Tunnel to get to the hotel, and, while I know that it's childish, that stright-six sounded fantastic in the tunnel! Well, it did until my girlfriend suddenly screamed and shouted that her foot was being scalded by a spray of boiling water...

Quickly turning the heater off – a cable-operated valve that shuts the flow of hot water to the under-dash heater radiator matrix – stemmed the flow of water and the engine wasn't getting hot because we hadn't lost that much coolant, so I kept the revs down and made it to the hotel in a car that was getting increasingly difficult to see out of because all the windows were steaming up.

The following morning, I topped up about a litre of coolant and drove the five miles to the site, which was enough to know that driving back down to Birmingham was a bad idea. It was like being inside a kettle with steam dripping on the inside of every window, whether the windows were open or closed, so I called the RAC, explaining that I needed a lift.

After a fascinating day looking at Hooton's aviation bus and car exhibits, I was taken back to Birmingham by an a very helpful driver from A1 Vehicle Contractors.

The next move is to take out the heater matrix because my repair has clearly failed and I may well need to have one made. I have a spare but it's not in great condition and a new one might actually be more efficient.

So the Monza has travelled around the UK back to Ipswich for what will hopefully be the last job before I start using it regularly.

But then, I've said that before...

2003 MG ZR

It was a bit like a 1950s horror film – an alien force spreading rapidly before my very eyes; seemingly growing bigger and increasingly worrying every day with an increasing chance of disaster.

Welcome to... The Curse of the Cracked Windscreen! Featuring the young starlet that is my 2003 MG ZR and the need for a for a major life-saving transplant. Can a donor be found before it's too late?

It all began with a tiny abrasion in the corner of the screen that developed into a small, hardly noticeable crack.

More recently, returning from an assignment in Wiltshire (yes, the ZR is capable of such trips!) a stone thrown up by a passing lorry crashed into the centre of the screen, leaving a life-sized impression of itself in the glass.

This must have stimulated the benign crack already present because one day it suddenly (cue collective scream from the cinema audience) expanded rapidly somewhere near Wolverhampton.

All seemed stable again but crack and stone damage inevitably met, and, much like Bonnie and Clyde, embarked on a trail of destruction across the screen.

Now I have been advised that (relatively) modern windscreens don't shatter into a million pieces like older ones do, but it wasn't worth taking the chance. Even unshattered, the screen would worry the life out of passengers. Worse, it denied the MG its New Year's Day trip to Brooklands. I'm sure it was sulking!

I discovered that you can claim part of the cost of a new screen on your car insurance, though a £90 excess was, rather annoyingly, still payable.

A certain national windscreen company had no problems locating a new 'screen but asked not to be photographed fitting it.

So the MG is back in use with visibility restored, and due to my extreme laziness has continued in front line service pending anything happening with the rest of the fleet.

The ZR has lodged a formal protest, however – I was thinking only the other day that it sounded unusually sporty.

That'll be a blowing exhaust, then...

KEEPERS

1986 FIAT STRADA ABARTH 130TC

Gill bought her Strada hot hatch new, so she certainly won't be parting with it now, more than 30 years later...

GILL HAGUE
STAFFORDSHIRE

My partner persuaded me to buy a Fiat Strada Abarth as soon as he saw one. I was driving a Ford Fiesta XR2 at the time, so I traded it in, and while it was a bit different, it was certainly a much quicker car. In fact, I was so taken with it that the five-mile drive home after collecting it from the dealership turned into putting 200 miles on the clock; it's just so much fun to drive.

'It became my daily-driver straightaway, covering around 12,000 miles a year, which included trips to Belgium and Italy to watch the Grand Prix. Sadly, it was stolen in 1990 and I was heartbroken – I must have cried for days – so it was such a relief when the police managed to recover it.

'Then in 1992 it was involved in an accident, damaging the bonnet and driver's side front wing. Once it was repaired, I decided to retire it from daily duties. That led to me joining the Fiat Motor Club GB, which I still belong to today, and from then on the Abarth led a new life on track days and being displayed at shows.

'Jeremy Clarkson even drove it for his Clarkson's Top 100 Cars video, so I'd say it's packed quite a lot into its 33 years on the road.

'The mileage is now up to 91,000, and apart from having the clutch cable replaced, I can't really remember suffering any major mechanical problems with it. And apart from the accident repairs, the rest of the body and paint are still original, as is the interior.

'Jeremy Clarkson once drove it for his Clarkson's Top 100 Cars video'

'Having said that I've just had the roof lining replaced because it was beginning to sag, but that's really about it in terms of any restoration work. I have a modern car for day-to-day use, but while it takes a few miles to get used to the Fiat again – especially without conveniences like power steering – it still puts a big smile on my face.

'It was one of the quickest hot hatchbacks in its day, and it still performs well today. I put it on SORN over winter, but always look forward to getting behind the wheel again once the better weather returns.

'I've always said that I intend to keep on enjoying it for as long as possible, and will only ever part with it when I can no longer drive!'

WHAT WE RECKON

'I've always been a fan of the Eighties hot hatches, and can remember car magazines of the day enthusing about the Abarth's performance. This one's a cracking example of the breed, having been cherished from new. Gill has certainly enjoyed a few adventures with it and more than 30 years with any car is bound to form a strong bond. So I don't blame her when she says that it's a keeper – I wouldn't part with it either!'

CHRIS RANDALL CONTRIBUTOR

THE INSURER'S VIEW

'Through our relationship with Fiat Motor Club GB we cover a number of Stradas and we particularly love the hot twin carb Abarth version. The Abarth was quicker than the Golf GTi of its day but sadly corrosion issues mean that very few now survive which, on a more positive note, keeps values buoyant. We would suggest that Gill consider an agreed value policy so that the true value of the Fiat would be realised should the worst happen.'

What's gone wrong The power steering pump is groaning and we've got another windscreen chip

CHARLIE CALDERWOOD

I promised to sort our Galant's boot leak last week, which would have been a fitting reward for the car as it reached 239,000 miles – the distance from Earth to the moon. The Mitsubishi has had other ideas, however. Having taken it for a drive once more, news ed Jon reported back that the Mitsubishi's drive belts were unusually noisy and that the power steering pump was groaning at full lock. In fact, the power assistance even seemed to be cutting out at the extremes. Best laid plans, and all that.

Despite constant fettling, I have never managed to completely silence the Galant's drive belts, but this is the first issue that we've had with the steering. It was clear that Jon hadn't been exaggerating when I first started the Mitsubishi – the drive belt let out a loud chirrup and then the power steering pump took over with a horrible metallic scratching noise. I turned it off just as soon as I could confirm that it was indeed the power steering that sounded like a load of shrapnel in a washing machine, then checked the fluid in the steering reservoir.

MILES FROM OUR TARGET

0 1 0 7 3 9

Sure enough, it was too low to reach the minimum line on the bottle mini-dipstick. With the correct fluid bought (thankfully, the Galant isn't fussy and takes pretty standard stuff) I began topping up. It's a slightly annoying process, wherein the bottle needs topping up, then the car needs to be started and the wheel turned from side to side, before repeating it all over again a couple of times, but the level eventually stopped going down with the engine running and all of the horrible noises were gone.

A quick drive confirmed that the steering was restored to full working order, but I'm still at a loss to explain why the level got so low in the first place. I could find no evidence of leaks anywhere within the steering system, though some of the pipes do admittedly look as though they have spent a decade in the North Sea.

In fairness to the car, I haven't checked the steering fluid level since we bought it, so it may just be that the level has simply depleted to a critical point very gradually – clearly this is yet another of the Galant's growing list of components that I'll have to keep a constant eye on.

To add insult to injury, the car also managed to pick up its second windscreen chip in six months, which I'm fairly sure came off the back of our other £1k Challenge car – the Volkswagen Polo – as I was following it; a case of jealous sibling rivalry, presumably.

Thankfully this chip was much easier to repair than the last one; it may have been slightly larger in area, but it was also much shallower.

Having patched up the Galant's most recent wounds, I'm hoping that I'll finally get to do the service it needs soon – I'll be adding 'replace the power steering fluid' to the job list.

£1k Challenge Polo must be jealous that the Galant is still our first choice for visiting shows – it launched a rock at its windscreen.

Power steering pipes, including this loop that sits behind the grille for cooling, hardly look fresh, but are at least dry.

Fluid refilled, but how long will the level remain?

NEXT WEEK Charlie elects to take the Polo on his latest round of Chasing Classic Cars dealership visits. Did it behave itself, or was he tempted to leave it behind and take the bus home instead?

THE WEEK IN DEALS

RICHARD BARNETT'S WEEK OF LOOKING AT THE MARKET

TUESDAY

Over to Barons for its first 2020 sale and it's pretty clear the Sandown Park sales are pulling in more people than when I first starting doing this job nine years ago. There's a real buzz about the place and, more importantly, people are there with the intention of buying. OK, so there was quite a lot of more modern cars, but there were a couple of pre-war motors and Barons still draws in the regular classics too. It's a mix punters like. Hopefully that means more punters throughout the year for one of the busiest classic auctioneers. There were plenty of interesting lots, my favourite being a 1978 Daimler Double Six project that had been standing for a few years – I had to talk myself out of this deserving project that sold for £1450.

FRIDAY

MPH's first of the year is looking very interesting and there's a 1950 Bentley MkVI special among the offerings. Those in the know will appreciate the fact it was built by arch-proponent Harry Rose, and it has a £28,32k estimate. There's a buzz about Bonhams aiming at the mid-market – I'll be interested to see how this latest sale pans out.

This 11-mile Mini is being sold by Brightwells in Leominster this week, with an £18.5-20.5k estimate.

WOULD YOU BUY A UNUSED CLASSIC?

Delivery-mileage cars often grab the headlines – but they're often not the best cars to purchase Ultra-low mileage classics drum up plenty of publicity and often command high prices, but they're a mixed blessing when it comes to holding their value.

Delivery-mileage cars are back in the spotlight, with Brightwells' sale today (4 March) including an 11-mile Mini and a seven-mile Land Rover Defender, while H&H's sale on 18 March includes an ex-museum MG SV and an 1100-mile Midget 1500.

Historics' Edward Briger-Stille believes that warranted low-mileage cars have plus points, especially regarding rarity and originality, but putting miles on effectively erases its strong point.

He said: 'In today's market, where there are so many classics on sale, it's the top cars that get the top money at auction, and in that respect, warranted very low mileage examples definitely tick the quality box. If a car has effectively been mothballed and comes to market with a handful of miles, it could be argued that its intrinsic collectability may be lost if significant mileage is added. History relates that museum-quality cars will trump identical examples – with values accruing exponentially.'

Brightwells' Matthew Parkin said: 'Both the Mini and Defender in our latest sale are both essentially 'new' cars and will no doubt fetch a healthy premium. But what can you do with them? It's pretty certain the Mini will remain a show exhibit – including its delivery stickers in the windows and will be bought by someone to park some cash.'

'As soon as the miles rack up though, the premium paid will disappear, but we are told that life is all about experiences these days so does it really matter – it will still depreciate less than your modern Mercedes.'

There's no getting away from the higher values that a low-mileage classic vehicle will generate compared with one that has covered an average or high mileage, as SWVA's Chris Holmes explained.

He said: 'Low mileage cars, if their condition matches their mileage, will achieve extremely high prices. The question is, if you use them, what happens to their value? This, I am afraid means that your investment will probably decrease in value. Some buyers do not mind because they just want the best.'

WELL BOUGHT

A motorsport-friendly bargain

How opting for rally-prepared resulted in a savvy buy

CAR 1986 Peugeot 205XT rally car SOLD £2813 ORIGINAL ESTIMATE NR, Silverstone, Race Retro, 21 Feb

RICHARD BARNETT
MARKETS EDITOR

All the factors added up to this being a potential bargain.

How many reasons do you want? It was offered without reserve, so there was a possibility it could have been bought mega-cheap. It was a pretty basic 205 rather than a Rallye or GTi, so it would be cheaper to insure, it had been prepared for club rallying and, equally importantly, it was in pretty good condition.

The vendor made a good call putting it into a competition car sale at Race Retro.

It could have sold well at any classic auction, but being entered in a dedicated competition car sale at a historic motorsport event increased its chances of selling, particularly because Race Retro is just as much about club sport as mega-bucks high-end racing.

Condition helped this car's case.

Generally it was very good. It showed a touch under 80,000 miles and had an MoT until October. The bodyshell was in pretty good order with no signs of corrosion and good panel fit. The panel shuts were fine too, which was a reasonable sign it hadn't had an 'off'. The later Peugeot alloy wheels with bolt-on wheelarches added a purposeful air. There had been quite a lot of expense inside – a full roll-cage had been fitted, as well as bucket seats, harnesses and fire extinguisher. On that theme, a sump guard had been fitted, as had an ignition isolator and a stainless steel exhaust system. For someone building a car like this, all those items add up and can be a deterrent. The original dash and door cards hadn't been cut about, meaning it could be used on a daily basis.

It's cheaper than going for a road-spec car.

Values of three-door 205s are on the up and adding in the value of the rally-related equipment meant the buyer of this one came out well. Sourcing a car and then equipping it would be dearer and would take time – here was affordable turn-key classic rallying at its best.

FORD GRANADA COUPÉ (1974-77)

The Granada Mk1's sleeker two-door cousin has performed relatively well price-wise over the past decade or so – had you picked up one in decent condition around 15 years ago, chances are you would have had change to spare from £3k, but nowadays you're looking at anywhere between £8 and £10k for the same car. We reckon that values could climb a little higher still – we've seen some pristine cars being advertised for anything up to £15k.

THE CCW VIEW

This is all about rarity – the latest DVLA figures suggest that fewer than 100 of these distinctive fastback Fords are left on the UK's roads, with plenty having fallen victim to corrosion, breakers looking for spares and banger racers. As a result, there's now greater demand than there is availability of running cars, which has nudged prices up.

AUCTION REVIEW SILVERSTONE, RACE RETRO. 21/22 FEBRUARY

BUYERS RACE TO COMPETITION SALE

Motorsport-prepared cars perform well, but a rare Lancia Hyena turns heads

As much part of Race Retro as the live rally stages and arguably equally interesting, Silverstone Auctions' sale at the historic motor sport event draws in plenty of would-be owners with its mix of competition and classic cars.

Competition cars were on the first day, ideally meeting the requirements of plenty who wanted to have a go. Better to buy something already built, and the result was a decent 65 percent sale rate, helped along by sensible estimates. A 1986 Peugeot 205XT built to club rally specification was a snip at under £3k and a Morris Minor to 'Academy' formula made a great buy at £11,813.

Day Two was dedicated to classics and performance cars, and while there wasn't a seriously big number, a decent level of quality more than compensated. Top of the tree price-wise was a super-smart 1964 Aston Martin DB5 which succeeded in drawing £708,750, while stunning examples of Mercedes-Benz 500E and Bentley Turbo Rs showed if the quality is right people will pay.

The top seller at the Saturday sale was a restored 1964 Aston Martin DB5 with upgraded 4.2 engine sold for £708,750, while the highest-priced competition car during the 70% sold Friday session was the ex-works Subaru Impreza driven by Petter Solberg in the 2007 WRC, which fetched £189,000. A Group B 1986 Ford RS200 justified pole position in the hall by selling for £182,250 to much applause, while a remarkably unmolested 42,000-mile 1981 VW Golf GTI Mk1 1.6 cost £18,000 and £2913 bought a 1986 Peugeot 205 XT Club Rally Car.

CCW'S AUCTION GURU

1991 MERCEDES-BENZ 500E

Mercedes-Benz 500Es aren't exactly rare on the classic auction scene, but many are tired, slightly scruffy or lacking in comprehensive history. However, this very nice example ticked all the right boxes, not least boasting a full service history from the Chelsea dealership that had supplied it new.

Passing from the mother (who was the original owner and a member of the Vardinogiannis shipping dynasty) to her daughter and then bought by the vendor two years ago, this 'E' scored further points thanks to its first-class bodywork, paint and interior. In all respects it was even better than the 35,000 miles from new suggested. A super-rare opportunity that was rightfully snapped up as there can be few examples as good as this.

1998 BENTLEY TURBO RT LWB

One of the finest Turbo Rs to grace an auction in the past couple of years, this UK-market, three-owner example had clearly been indulged, having covered 47,000 miles and coming with plenty of service history. The all-important bodywork was excellent, with not even the slightest bubbling to the rear wheelarches or bottoms of the rear wings. The panels were fantastically straight and the trim was thoroughly excellent, with no stone chips or scratches to the front bumper, bonnet or door mirrors: in the same vein the alloy wheels had no signs of kerbing. It was equally good inside, with seat facings, door panels and wood well-kept. In all, a delight and certainly a bargain. Will 2020 throw in any better examples?

£21,375

1992 LANCIA HYENA

Take the underpinnings of a Lancia Delta Integrale Evo and hand them to Zagato, and the result is the Hyena, a close-coupled coupé that, while not as radical as the Alfa Romeo SZ, wasn't far off. The Hyena remains a much rarer beast than the Alfa though, as 24 were built. This example, with three previous keepers, was in fine order, with straight bodywork, good shutlines and a very good tan interior. Hardly cheap, but an offering par excellence nonetheless.

1978 FORD ESCORT RS2000

The expression 'they're only original once' is one much used in the trade, but Silverstone was right to use it when referring to this luscious RS2000. It had everything going for it, the first (titled) owner selling it to the vendor in 2016. The clock showed 64,000 miles and it had been very, very well looked after.

£34,875

Rust-proofed when new, the panels were extremely good, and the black paint still had plenty of depth and shine to it. The interior was highly presentable – way better than many Fords of this era offered at auction. A great buy and in the grand scheme of all things fast Ford, very well bought.

Minimal-mileage MG heads to Duxford

Showroom-fresh Midget included in latest H&H sale

H&H Classics heads east to Duxford and as this week's issue went to press its entry list was still being compiled. But it's already assembled an offering covering most ages.

As always it's an eclectic offering that numbers two large 1930s Lagondas (including a 1939 V12 drophead) and an Aston Martin DB6.

For those with a smaller budget there is still enough to please, including a 1980 MG Midget that has covered 1179 miles from new, as well as a 1952 Bentley MkVI that features Freestone and Webb rather than factory-issue coachwork. A 1925 Morris Cowley tourer should please H&H's punters and performance Fords get a look-in too, with a 1986 Ford Sierra RS Cosworth and a 1973 Ford Capri 3000 GXL all vying for the attention of punters.

■ 01925 210035 ■ handh.co.uk

1979 JAGUAR E-TYPE 2+2 PROJECT

This manual gearbox 2+2 has been owned by the vendor since 1976 and shows 78,000 miles on the clock, H&H says. It has a full-length sunroof and has been pulled out of long-term storage and is ripe for restoration. Temptingly estimated.

1925 MORRIS COWLEY TOURER

The Morris Cowley has been part of the classic movement for many decades, being seen as worthy of preservation even in the 1940s.

This example was sold new to Builth Wells and retains its original chassis, engine and reg number. Restored in the mid-1980s it changed hands several times before being bought by the vendor four years ago. Now pleasingly mellowed but still smart, it's a worthy offering.

1952 BENTLEY MKVI

While the MkVI ushered in an ethos of the factory meeting most bodywork demands in-house, it was clear some buyers would opt for something a little more bespoke. Freestone and Webb was one of those working on the recently-introduced MkVI chassis and this example is one of 15 built. H&H says it has covered 34,000 miles from new, with three owners, and there has been a lot of restoration work by Alyth-based Classic Restorations. Supremely elegant, very unusual and well presented, it's worth a closer look.

ESTIMATE
£30-40k

MARKET VIEW

While a £360k+ 1939 Lagonda V12 DHC, fully restored since acquisition at auction in Buxton in 2006, deservedly has star lot billing at Duxford, the majority of the 70 classics consigned so far are far more affordable for most of us. A 2017 restored 1989 Austin Mini Thirty with £15,000 worth of invoices has been estimated at £11,000-13,000 and £12,000-13,000 is sought for a 1988 Austin Mini Mayfair 998 driven only 806 miles by one owner. But then a £12,000-16,000 MG Midget 1500 has only done 1179 miles since new in 1980 and a £9000-11,000 1976 Midget 16,000 warranted mileage. A 1961 Citroen 2CV AZLP (AZ, indicating enlarged 425cc engine, L standing for Luxe trim and P for opening boot lid) may seduce a Francophile with £12,000-16,000.

RICHARD HUDSON-EVANS
CCW'S AUCTION GURU

ESTIMATE
£12-16k

1980 MG MIDGET

While there's seemingly an infinite supply of ultra-low mileage MGBs in LE guise, low-mileage Midgets are rarer, possibly because they encourage plenty of use. This late Inca Yellow model has covered 1179 miles from new, initially being owned by a British Leyland employee. MoT test certificates show by April 1989 it had covered 447 miles and by 1996, 784 miles. 'Excellent' in all mechanical and cosmetic aspects, it's a great find for any serious MG collector.

REVIEW IN BRIEF MORRIS LESLIE, ERROL, PERTH. 22 FEBRUARY

A strong mix in Scotland
Traditional classics perform well for Morris Leslie

The first of four sales across 2020 here was a typically Morris Leslie sale, mixing a strong mix of eras and price points, which appealed to buyers from right across the UK. Plenty of traditionally popular models from Jaguar and Mercedes-Benz lined-up alongside the more unusual and with a fair few away, here was the evidence buying keenness remains strong north of the border, provided estimates are sensibly set.

1972 ROVER P6 3500

Buyers who fancy plenty of British bent-eight grunt but don't fancy a Daimler V8 250 have a viable alternative in the Rover 3500. A perennial favourite, the 3500 offers power and affordability, plus good spares back-up. Coming with plenty of history and in generally good order, at under £4k here was proof that decent old school grunt needn't break the bank.

Have fun and save money by bagging one of these wise buys

There are plenty of reasons why certain classic cars might be considered more popular than others. For some it's down to their looks. For others it's because they were the finest B-road champions that money could buy. Then there were those that epitomised luxury or were perhaps one of the enduring family favourites that used to belong to half of the residents on any given cul-de-sac in Britain.

Crucially, those cars that weren't in the limelight aren't necessarily bad cars – far from it – it's just that they haven't become synonymous with the classic car hobby in the same way that others have – for whatever reason. Best of all, these cars present a fantastic opportunity for savvy classic car buyers today.

We love to celebrate underdogs here at Classic Car Weekly and that's exactly what we're doing over the next packed 20 pages – offering our expert pick of undervalued and underrated classics that can be snapped up for a fraction of the price of their better-known mainstream rivals. In some cases, they could be yours for as little as £250.

We've also included tips on where to find the bargains that we've highlighted, what checks to make so you can ensure that the car you're buying is in the condition the seller says it is, plus how to get the best deal when it's time for you to part with your hard-earned cash.

PEUGEOT 205 (1983-98)

WHAT TO PAY £750-4000

The delights of the 205 GTI are well known, but the lesser models are rarely talked about, despite offering many of the thrills for far less money than GTIs are now fetching even in poor condition. Obvious next-best-things like the XS and GT models are now starting to appreciate, and other 1.4 litre models aren't far behind, either. Undervalued for now, their prices are sure to be pulled up by the bullish GTI market.

Charlie Calderwood

VOLVO C70 (1996-2002)

WHAT TO PAY £650-3000

Even an appearance in the late-Nineties film revival of The Saint didn't prevent first-generation C70 values from belly-flopping – and that's a shame, because they arrived right at the time when Volvo's design regained some elegance. Rapid in warbling T5 form and cossetting as a convertible, serviceable examples of both bodystyles start from as little as £650; that buys a well-used 2.0-litre Turbo that's more than capable of getting out of its own way. Reckon on up to £3k for a mint, low mileage T5.

Jon Burgess

L-R FREELANDER I (L314) (1997-06)

WHAT TO PAY £600-3000

Seriously capable off-road and far more refined than any of its rivals, the first-gen Freelander gets a raw deal; shunned by many and run into the ground by others, the 1.8-litre K- and 2.0-litre L-Series diesel-engined models represent serious value; the only cars fetching higher values are the later BMW-powered Td4s, especially post-facelift. Just £595 bought a sound 1999 1.8-litre five door at Mathewsons last year, while £2795 online was top whack for a facelifted 2004 five-door TD4 SE.

Jon Burgess

FIAT CINQUECENTO SPORTING (1994-98)

WHAT TO PAY £500-2500

Old Fiats aren't exactly known for their durability, which is no doubt one of the reasons why the Cinquecento Sporting is still so cheap. Mockery on Channel 4 sitcom The Inbetweeners and not particularly impressive performance did the rest. The Cinquecento Sporting isn't about bar room bragging rights, though, it's just a fizzy, featherweight ball of Italian fun. This is one of the cheapest cars on our list, yet one of the most fun on a tight back road or city street.

Charlie Calderwood

AUSTIN MAESTRO (1982-94)

WHAT TO PAY £400-2000

We reckon that the Maestro's just about the cheapest route into an Eighties classic – all of the examples that we've seen selling at auction over the past 18 months have been between £600 and £2000, and unless you're looking for a concours car or one of the rarer MG-badged versions, you're unlikely to fork out much more than that. It's a lot of car for the money, being dependable, fun to drive and perfect for attending shows like Pride of Longbridge (18 April).

David Simister

FIAT PANDA MkII (2003-12)

WHAT TO PAY £600-3000

Most original Pandas are now in the hands of clued-up classic fans, which limits your ability to pick up a bargain. But while its five-door Noughties successor is still a bit too new and abundant in number for some – with the notable exception of the range-topping 100HP, which already has a following among modern classic fans – it has reached the bottom of its depreciation curve. Exactly the time to buy one. Great little cars for well under £1000.

David Simister

PEUGEOT 106 (1991-2003)

WHAT TO PAY £750-5000

Frequently dismissed as a shopping trolley, the 106 is actually one of Peugeot's best driving hatches, refining much of what the 205 did so well. It's a bit smaller than the 205, though no lighter, being a decade newer, the 106 provides similar small-car thrills for far less outlay. Phase 1 Rallyes and GTIs are rare and pricey by 106 standards, but even these cars are significantly cheaper than 205 GTIs in equivalent condition – despite their similar performance. Post-facelift Phase 2 sporting models will be the next versions to get more expensive, with cooking-spec Phase 1s becoming increasingly rare and desirable, too.

Charlie Calderwood

FORD MONDEO MkI (1992-96)

WHAT TO PAY £500-2000

A huge step up from the dated Sierra in 1992, the Mondeo was the family car to buy in the mid-Nineties. Packing improved performance and styling over its predecessor, the Mondeo MkI raised the bar and gave buyers a more exciting drive, while keeping things affordable. Today the car holds up well against modern traffic, plus maintenance is easy and not too costly. Sadly, many have been scrapped or used for banger racing but find yourself a good example and it will last you for many years to come, and should also gain in value as Nineties nostalgia continues to rise.

James Sadlier

FORD ESCORT CABRIOLET (1986-2000)

WHAT TO PAY £250-1500

We've seen MkIIIs, mostly in XR3i guise, sell for five figures, but drop-top Escorts are maligned for the most part. With a grand to spend, you'll find plenty of decent fifth- and sixth-generation Cabriolets for sale, regardless of spec – a 1994 Si Cabrio sold for £300 in SWVA's January sale. If you prefer the more Eighties-look of the fourth-gen Escorts, 1.6i cars can also be had for less than £1k.

Chris Hope

PEUGEOT 405 (1988-97)

WHAT TO PAY £500-2000

Proudly built in Britain, and still produced in Azerbaijan to this day, the Peugeot 405 is long-overdue a price hike – and the market is starting to wake up. Most of the remaining cars are Phase IIs built from 1993 onwards; cared-for higher-spec SRIs, GTXs, STIs and Exclusives fetch good money at auction, with a 1991 SRI managing £2100 at ACA in 2018. Serviceable, higher-mileage diesel estates are beloved by families, too – reckon on well below £1000 privately and at auction, especially if a less-popular petrol engine is fitted. Just £880 bought a 1993 GLi estate at Brightwells in 2017, but the Mi16, Mi16x4 and T16 are in a different price league.

Jon Burgess

AUSTIN MAXI (1969-81)

WHAT TO PAY £550-5500

The Maxi has long attracted derision, much of it underserved. Early cable-change gearboxes could be obstructive, but the engines are willing, the interiors huge and – unlike the Allegro – it's a proper hatchback. Which makes the highest auction price for one in years – £5824 for a 1980 1750 HLS (H&H, February 2016) seem criminally cheap. I nearly bought a similar car myself many years ago – only the vague five-speed manual gearbox really put me off.

Mike Le Caplain

PEUGEOT 306 (1993-2002)

WHAT TO PAY £300-3000

Perhaps best thought of as a 205 for grown-ups, with almost as sublime handling, yet 306s only fetch a fraction of the five-figure sums that good 205s make. So far only the limited-run Rallye models are starting to fly at £5-6k. Next most exciting are the S16 and GTi-6, which are getting hard to find but can be had for £2-3k. For real bargains, even a 1.6 LX is a fun drive and they can be had for £500-600. In general, values are so low that you are only likely to find Cabriolets at auction, and even they are ridiculously cheap for a drop-top. Mathewson's sold a lairy yellow 1997 model last December – complete with optional hard-top – for a below estimate £625.

FORD PUMA (1997-2002)

WHAT TO PAY £500-1500

This might have the underpinnings of a Fiesta MkIV underneath, but it has similar performance to that of a super-mini. For me it's one of the most fun small cars to drive, and you can really throw it around. Most people will opt for a 1.7- engine over the 1.4, but after owning the latter I can say that the 0-60mph time and top speed didn't feel that far off the more powerful model because the car itself is a little lighter. The well-known issue with the Puma is its ability to rust. Once it starts, it becomes expensive to fix. Find yourself a garaged example and you'll have a car that will live on for many years to come. Unless I get there first!

James Sadlier

ROVER R8 (1989-95)

WHAT TO PAY £500-2500

The R8 range can still be had for buttons, provided you stay away from the GSi Turbo and Tomcat Turbo coupé. Their rarity influences prices; aficionados will also pay well (in R8 market terms) for a surviving 216 or 416 GTi. Otherwise, the range of body styles – three- and five-door hatch, saloon, convertible, coupé and Tourer – are all easily attainable for less than £2000. That top price bracket would have got you an immaculate 414 SLi at Mathewsons last year. At the other end of the scale, H&H let a sound 214Si through for just £525 in 2016.

Jon Burgess

TALBOT SAMBA (1981-86)

WHAT TO PAY £500-2200

Almost forgotten today, but find a good one and the Samba's simplicity is its making, not its downfall. Using the same basic body as the Citroën LNA and Peugeot 104, the Samba suffers simply from the fact that few people know what it is. That, however, is great for the savvy buyer who wants something different. Peppy and frugal on the juice. Win-win.

Richard Barnett

MERCEDES-BENZ W124 SALOONS (1984-95)

WHAT TO PAY £350-3800

All are epically well-made saloons that will easily clock 250k, but the smart money is on the six-cylinder models, from 260E to E320. The market prefers them now and always will. CCA sold a rare 4-Matic (4WD) 300E in December for £3885 that was less than perfect. But DVCA took just £1540 for a plain 300E with the same mileage a month earlier.

Russ Smith

CITROËN XM (1989-2000)

WHAT TO PAY £400-4000

The XM was the latest in a long line of double chevrons that had it all – looks, space, performance and that famously cossetting ride – only for the likes of BMW, Mercedes and Jaguar to kick sand in its face. French collectors still spend huge on the very best (who could forget the £33,600 that Leclerc mustered for one in December 2017?) but few UK models breach £4k.

Mike Le Caplain

ROVER 800 (1986-99)

WHAT TO PAY £500-4000

The mid- to late-1980s saw volume makers (Ford, GM, PSA and Rover) looking for a slice of BMW and Mercedes-Benz action, and in many ways the 800 nailed it thanks to Honda's involvement. Today, the relatively few survivors don't make strong sums, unless they're late, immaculate Turbo Coupés. Even tidy later cars, whether saloon or hatch, don't pull in the money.

Richard Barnett

100 UNDERVALUED & UNDERRATED CLASSICS

RENAULT 5 (1985-96)

WHAT TO PAY £600-2500

Defining the hatchback as much as the first-generation Fiat 127, the Renault 5 offered looks, versatility and a typically Gallic unpretentious air that drew heavily on the R4's car-for-all-people philosophy. They enjoyed a long production run, and the second-generation Supercinq in particular is still relatively undervalued. Those sales successes from the mid-1980s to the mid-1990s have led to a reasonable supply of cars. They've not seen the value hikes or following of Metros, but that's to the 5's benefit. Although the 'informed' might question the 5's reliability, they're as tough as old boots mechanically and good structurally, too. Most reasons for avoiding a 5 are unfounded, but at least they've helped to keep prices low.

MG ZR (2001-05)

WHAT TO PAY £400-2500

The ZR – range-topping 160 aside – seems to have largely slipped under the hot hatch radar and we've seen examples offered for as little as £400 in the classified ads, with sellers rarely asking for much more than £1500. We ran a ZR 105 for a year, and that very car is still used every day by our own Nick Larkin (check out his latest report on it on page 25). It's still making us smile, even after years of hard use.

David Simister

DAIHATSU COPEN (2004-10)

WHAT TO PAY £700-2000

So cute that Disney could have built it, this modern classic is the Japanese Kei-car that wanted to be an Audi TT. Having been largely forgotten, they are now bargain buys. More fun original had a rev-happy 67bhp 660cc turbo motor, which was replaced by a cleaner, normally-aspirated 86bhp 1.3 from 2007. ACA recently sold a nice 1.3 with a cherished plate for £1420. Sounds like a bargain.

Russ Smith

ROVER METRO (1990-98)

WHAT TO PAY £300-2000

The trouble with Austin Metros these days is finding them – so few survive and they rarely come up for sale, but you'll have no such problem with its Rover-badged successors. They're big fun to drive and the K-series engine should give you years of trouble-free service – as long as it's been looked after. The fact that there are still plenty to choose from has helped to keep prices to below a grand for even the best examples.

David Simister

AUSTIN ALLEGRO (1973-82)

WHAT TO PAY £600-1750

The Vanden Plas Princess – with its Rolls-Royce-in-miniature aspirations – and 1500 Special consistently attract prices above £3000. However, it's still straightforward enough to get an example of one of the lowlier-spec Allegros (including the useful, and some say better-looking, estate, which makes up for the saloon's lack of a hatchback) for less than £1000. Sure, it may've been flawed when new, but well over 40 years on it remains largely ignored by the market – and definitely represents a phenomenal amount of car for your money.

Chris Hope

CCW'S TOP TIPS: BUYING FOR A GRAND OR LESS

BE FLEXIBLE WITH THE CAR YOU'RE AFTER

Shop around and you'll still find Riley Elfs, MG Midgets and Morris Minors for under £1k, but chances are they'll be tired and need a little (or a lot) of work. The cars that represent far better value in this price bracket are models from the 1980s and 1990s – they're affordable simply because they're not as readily accepted as classics at the moment. Among the models spotted in CCW's classifieds are a Reliant Scimitar SS1 and an R8-generation of the Rover 200 and 400 – including the 200 Cabriolet.

Extended friends and family can often be an unlikely source of cheap cars in good condition, particularly if lots of your friends are also classic car devotees.

This one's more about luck and it pays not to be choosy.

BE PREPARED TO HAGGLE

The £1200 classic that might seem slightly out of your budget can easily become a £1000 bargain if you're prepared to negotiate on price – and most reasonable sellers are prepared to play ball.

Cars advertised with 'ono' – 'or nearest offer' in plain English – immediately after the price, are a good starting point, indicating even before you make the call that the seller might lower the asking price for the right deal.

Another good tip is to watch out for cars that have spent a while lingering in the classifieds; if the owner is keen for a quick sale it's well worth putting in an offer.

You might get politely rebuffed by a seller holding out for more – but as the old saying goes: If you don't ask, you don't get.

IS A RESTO RIGHT FOR YOU?

There's nothing more satisfying than plucking an unwanted wreck out of the classifieds, lavishing a few months' TLC on it in your garage and then impressing everyone with the result at a show the following summer – but it's not always that straightforward.

That slightly rotten MGB might look like a sub-£1k bargain but bear in mind that there are plenty of previously restored ones within reach of a £5k budget, so the cost of rescuing the unrestored car might actually end up costing you more. Talk to owners' clubs and fellow owners before taking the plunge. Unless you can do most of the work in-house and source parts cheaply you could end up with a false economy on the back of that trailer.

QUALITY NOT QUANTITY

£1500 MODERN CLASSICS TO BUY NOW

If you want real bargain B-road thrills, you need to look to the classics of the turn of the century. Here are five of the best not to miss before values start shooting up

MAZDA RX-8 (2003-2010)

ALFA ROMEO GTV 2.0 TWIN SPARK (1994-2003)

FORD MONDEO ST TDCi (2005-2007)

FIAT COUPÉ (1993-2000)

RENAULT CLIO 172/182 (1999-2005)

All cars go through a value trough, where mainstream drivers consider them merely old before enthusiasts start to appreciate them as classics, and it's here that you can find the most bang for your buck. Cars of the late 1990s and early 2000s fill that spot today. Sure, they may not have the period charm of a 1960s MG or the stark lines of a 1980s BMW, but if you look in the right places, there are cars with strong performance and fantastic driving dynamics to be had in decent condition for less than £1500.

There are offerings to suit various tastes within this budget, too, including those with room for the whole family, those with styling from Italy's leading design house, and even a last-of-its-kind technical curio. There are rich rewards to be had for those willing to buy when the market for these cars is cold – but it won't last forever.

WORDS Charlie Calderwood PHOTOGRAPHY Jonathon Jacob

FIAT COUPÉ (1993-2000)

It may look similar to the Alfa, but Chris Bangle's design actually preceded Pininfarina's GTV, and also beat off a Pininfarina proposal that became the Peugeot 406 Coupé.

WHAT TO PAY
£1-7k

WHY YOU WANT ONE

The Tipo-based, Chris Bangle-designed Fiat Coupé offers a more GT-esque approach to the B-road blast than its Alfa GTV sibling. More upright, more spacious and – in 20v Turbo form – faster in a straight line, the Coupé is just a few steps more sensible, too. That's not to say that it doesn't handle well – far from it, in fact – but it is a car that prefers sweeping corners – or slow-in, fast-out switchbacks – to tight technical driving. All the while, the 20v Turbos offer beautifully sonorous performance that would compare well against supercars from a decade or so earlier, all in a Fiat you can pick up from as little as £1500.

WHAT TO AVOID

Like the Alfa, the Fiat has a very tight engine bay that makes cambelt changes and clutch replacement awkward jobs – so prepare for a big bill if either of those are on the horizon. The turbochargers aren't the sturdiest and can struggle to cope with ambitious modifications, so de-catalysed exhausts and over-boosted engines should be avoided. Check for a dodgy turbo by watching for smoke when idling from cold. There's also a failure-prone coolant hose hidden at the rear of the engine against the bulkhead; be very suspicious of a car with any leaking here, because it can cause the engine to cook before the driver is any the wiser.

No amount of ST badges can hide the Ford's bland dashboard, but the seats are much better and the driving position accommodates larger frames well.

WHAT TO PAY
£1-3.5k

FORD MONDEO ST TDCi (2005-2007)

Big alloys and cohesive bodykit lift the Mondeo's slightly anonymous shape into that of a smart-looking sports saloon.

WHY YOU WANT ONE

B-road thrills don't have to cost the earth, certainly not from the decade of the performance diesel. Mondeos have always been keen handlers, with the MkIII considered one of the best all-rounders of its time, offering comfort, space and enjoyable road manners. It won't dart with the agility of a Clio or GTV, but the steering is sufficiently feelsome to make hustling it down a back road more fun than most and it can take your family on a comfortable cross-country trip the following day. The ST even managed to be something of a looker thanks to a set of stylish 16-spoke alloys, though the interior doesn't stand up as well to modern eyes as the exterior.

WHAT TO AVOID

As with most modern diesels, the Mondeo has a dual mass flywheel, which aren't cheap to replace. With normal use, they can last well over 100,000 miles, but abuse (which any Ford ST is vulnerable to) can shorten that lifespan. Even if yours isn't showing any problems, most mechanics would recommend replacing it if you're replacing a high mileage car's clutch, so budget for £750-1000 if there's juddering under load or any sign of imminent clutch failure. Timely oil changes are essential for the health of the big diesel unit, so walk away from any car lacking a proper service history and check for any MoT advisories concerning suspension components – they're not cheap to replace.

WHY BUY NOW?

Mondeo MkIIIs are only just creeping on to enthusiasts' radars so values are at rock-bottom. Many – even half-decent ones – have, or are soon heading for the scrapyard therefore, so now is very much the time to buy. The ST TDCi may not be the obvious car in the range to focus upon because V6s will always be the halo cars, but the diesel makes much more sense for actual use, allowing the Mondeo to show off its skills as both a capable B-road thrasher and a long-legged, economical cruiser.

With oil-burners having now thoroughly unfashionable, cars like the ST TDCi will increasingly be recognised as one of the automotive world's blind alleys.

MAZDA RX-8 (2003-2010)

WHY YOU WANT ONE

If you commonly explain your interest in classics with the popular refrain 'all modern cars are the same', then the RX-8 is surely the car for you. With a now extinct form of engine, unusual two-and-a-bit-doors body and charismatic styling, nothing else is like an RX-8. The Mazda isn't just an ironic curio, however; its rotary engine is as sporty as engines get, thriving on high revs – and doing very little without them. Couple that with an agile rear-drive chassis, great handling and a slick gearbox, and it's hard to see why RX-8s aren't worth more.

WHAT TO AVOID

While fantastic when working, the RX-8's rotary engine simply can't stand up to the same mileages that a contemporary piston engine can. This isn't because of any structural weakness in the engine, but because the apex-seals, which play essentially the same role as a piston ring, wear relatively quickly. Do a compression test on any car that you're looking at buying – you want the result to measure at least six bar per rotor face. Obvious burnt oil coming out the exhaust, lack of power and troublesome starting are all warning signs – even low mileage cars can suffer, so don't consider that a guarantee.

WHY BUY NOW?

RX-8s are now reaching the age when most cars get scrapped – and you can expect that cycle to be particularly savage on RX-8 numbers thanks to their fragile engines. This, as well as increasing appreciation as the last gasp of the rotary experiment, means that you won't find cheaper RX-8s than you will now – although it should be remembered that the newest RX-8s still have a bit of depreciation left to do. Ownership will never be completely free of the fear of an imminent £2.5k engine rebuild, but you won't be so fussed about that when you're picking them up for £1500.

WHY BUY NOW?

The days of super-cheap 20v Turbos has already passed, to the point where Turbos in our £1500 budget will either be very modified, very high-mileage, in need of some work... or possibly all the above. Clearly, then, the Coupé is beginning to be recognised as a classic, with enthusiasts overcoming their fear of the spectre of unreliability to get their piece of Bangle's masterful design. If you don't fancy doing the work needed to bring a cheap 20v Turbo up to scratch, the naturally-aspirated four- and five-cylinder cars are well within budget and provide similar performance to that of the GTV Twin Spark. This won't last, however, with Turbo values sure to drag up the rest of the range as buyers look for alternatives, and restorers look for parts donors.

ALFA ROMEO GTV 2.0 TWIN SPARK (1994-2003)

Phase 1 and 2 GTVs used Twin Spark engines. The 2003-on Phase 3 used more troublesome JTS engines.

WHY YOU WANT ONE

Italian multi-valve twin-cam engine, Alfa's own multi-link rear suspension and dramatic Pininfarina styling – need we say more? OK, we will, but only because we like the Alfa so much and it doesn't get the love it deserves. Lauded at launch for its handling and looks, the car still stands up on those counts today, with a chassis that ranks the GTV among one of the best front-wheel drive coupés ever made. The GTV was also far better built than Alfas of the past, and offers the most luxurious interior of our line-up today, with enough leather in most models' interiors to send an Extinction Rebellion activist running for the hills.

WHAT TO AVOID

Though far from rust-prone, age is taking its toll on some GTVs, with the rear of the car generally seeming to fare worse. Check the floorpans, but also the suspension componentry. The rear multi-link arrangement is typically Italian, being only just as strong as it needs to be, so anything more than light surface corrosion is an issue. Check all sides of the suspension, feeling for crustiness in the bits that you can't see, or an expensive MoT failure could be just around the corner. Twin Spark engines are solid if certain eccentricities are kept on top of (the cam belt and tensioner need regular replacement, for example), Alfa has the best interior of our group, with leather common, giving a premium feel.

and tight packaging can make routine maintenance tiresome. A clutch that bites at the end of its pedal is worth haggling strongly over or walking away from – as is an alternator that shows any signs of being on the way out.

WHY BUY NOW?

The faster V6 and Phase 3 2.0 JTS GTVs are out of our budget, but that's no problem because the former's extra front end weight sacrificed the four-cylinder cars' agility and the latter suffered from a host of engine issues. The Twin Sparks are now too old for mainstream motorists, but this makes now exactly the time for classic fans to pick one up with values already creeping up from rock bottom; one-time £1000 examples are now closer to £1500. There are few other cars you can pick up for that money with a 2.0-litre engine, leather and fewer than 100k miles on the clock, let alone ones that drive as well as the Alfa.

High seating position was the most common criticism of the Clio when it was new, and results in a rather tilted steering wheel, much like a Mini's.

RENAULT CLIO 172/182 (1999-2005)

182 has different bumpers from those on the standard Clio, but non-enthusiasts will still mistake it for a shopping trolley – at least until they see the twin exhausts.

WHY YOU WANT ONE

Ranked among the best hot hatches of all time, and certainly one of the best of its era, the Clio 172 and 182 are among the performance bargains of our times, offering 0-60mph times of just over seven seconds for the sort of money that most drivers put down as deposits. Combining high-specific output VVT engines with a typically brilliant French chassis, the Renault was a staggering hit, with many concluding that not only was it the best hot hatch of its time, but that it was more fun than anything else on sale, including metal ten times its price. While not exactly built like a bank vault, the Clio is fundamentally reliable, too, so there aren't even massive maintenance bills.

WHAT TO AVOID

The biggest problem with Clio 172/182s is their previous owners. Neglected, modded or tracked cars are common. The twin-cam engine is a reliable unit, but demand evidence of servicing, including the auxiliary belt, which needs replacing twice as often as the cambelt and will take the cambelt with it if it snaps. A particularly abusive owner will also cause the synchros on second and third gears to wear, which you'll pick up as notchiness in the gearchange – it should be soft and very slightly vague. The cam cover is also known to leak oil thanks to the sealant that Renault used, and it's a big job to sort.

WHY BUY NOW?

You only need to look at the values of VW Golf GTI MkIs or Peugeot 205 GTIs to see how the best hot hatch of each generation can quite quickly rise in value from banger money to five figures. Many enthusiasts ignore the Renault because of its unremarkable appearance, but as the generation that idolised them comes into the money with which to start buying them, there's no doubt that values will increase as the decade progresses. Now, in short, is the time to fetch one of the good ones. You might not be able to afford one if you wait...

HILLMAN AVENGER (1970-81)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-4750

The Avenger's production run straddled almost all of the 1970s but its problem can be summed up in two words: 'Ford' and 'Escort'. While the market continues to chase the blue oval, the Avenger – good looking and pretty well built, and fitted with decent engines – remains criminally overlooked. They go well, handle well and have plenty of space, but despite their scarcity they're still remarkable value for money. And deliciously rare to boot.

MAZDA MX-5 MkII (1998-05)

WHAT TO PAY £800-3000

There are so many MX-5s out there that there's a sizeable gulf between what mint and average MkIs (NA) are making, but we haven't seen that happen to the same extent with its NB successor, with even the best rarely making more than £3k. This is down to the sheer number out there and classic fans tending to go for the NAs, so there's plenty of scope for taking your time to find a bargain here.

David Simister

VAUXHALL CAVALIER MkII (1981-88)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-1600

The Cavalier MkII proved to be a huge seller. A huge step forward from the original, the MkII is refined and stable at speed and light and nimble for such a large car. Find a MkII today and you won't regret it – just keep an eye out for rust around sills, jacking joints, wings and wheel arches. Corrosion aside, you do get a lot of car for your money, and if you can get a good CD example then you'll be enjoying the best of the bunch.

James Sadlier

TOYOTA MR2 MkII (1990-99)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-7000

Mid-engined, check. Fantastic handling, check. Pop-up headlamps, check. Yours from as little as £500, absolutely. With a few notable examples – chiefly Mazda's MX-5 – a lot of Japanese sports cars dip below the radar of your average classic car enthusiast and they really shouldn't, especially when in second-generation guise the MR2 offers so much. The UK got the basic 119bhp MR2, plus the 158bhp GT (with or without T-bar roof). People are beginning to cotton on to their appeal – a GT-I 16 sold via Classic Car Auctions in December for £4400 – so now is the time to buy.

HILLMAN SUPER MINX (1961-67)

WHAT TO PAY £1500-5000

Following on from the Series Minx cars was the Super Minx – larger, with room for four and handsome transatlantic styling. Today these cars offer fantastic value – the convertibles might be up to twice as expensive as the equivalent saloon, but nonetheless plenty sell for less than £7000. Case in point – the convertible that sold in ACA's January sale for £5512. Mathewsons also sold a saloon last month for £4300.

Chris Hope

RELIANT SCIMITAR SS1 (1984-90)

WHAT TO PAY £600-3000

Printing presses could be kept busy for hours with words praising the MX-5 and the early models creeping up in price, but the Midlands' own small sports car from the same era is still woefully underrated by the wider market. We reckon it's the Michelotti-penned love-it-or-loathe-it styling that puts buyers off, but for a rag-top with dependable engines and grin-inducing handling it's well worth a look for this sort of money.

David Simister

BMW 3 SERIES (E46) (1998-05)

WHAT TO PAY £900-4000

We're not talking the M3 or 330Ci Clubsport, which have been creeping up in price for a while now; the real bargains are to be found in lowlier versions, which you can pick up in decent condition for well under £2k. Values are being held back by the sheer number still out there and the fact they're not widely thought of as classics – which is exactly where the E30-generation models were 15 years ago, and look where they are now...

David Simister

MERCEDES-BENZ SLK (1996-04)

WHAT TO PAY £750-£4000

A Mercedes sports car with a rakish good looks, a choice of supercharged and V6 engines and a folding metal roof years before anyone else used it should make it a bona fide classic, right? Not if current values are to be believed. Most sell at auction for £2-3k, with a couple sneaking in at well under £1500. The ones coming up for sale most often are the supercharged '230' models, but there are deals to be had on the V6 models (less so the AMG ones) if you're patient.

David Simister

CITROËN BX (1982-94)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-6000

The BX's delightfully boxy styling is very much of its time, which made them almost worthless during their 'banger' period. With 16-valve cars firmly in £5k territory now, however, it's clear that the BX's Gandini-penned lines are finally being appreciated. Less exotic variants, then, won't stay as cheap as they are for long. Even 1360cc cars are entertaining to drive thanks to their lightweight construction, and all feature Citroën's famed hydropneumatic suspension – for far less money than a DS, GS or CX.

Charlie Calderwood

AUDI TT MkI (1998-2006)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-3000

The original TT is one of the most recognisable cars on the road. They are charming and easy to run and have proved reliable over the years. Unleash the TT on a long-distance cruise and you'll not want to drive anything else. MkI prices are starting to increase with the realisation that these are now bona fide classics. Well-maintained examples can still be found at a decent price, but the low-mileage cars are becoming expensive and rare.

James Sadlier

BUYING PRIVATELY

THE INSPECTION

Do your homework – read buying guides, drive several examples and – if you can – bring a club member or marque expert with you. If possible, get the car up on a ramp so you can inspect its underside properly, but if you can't, look for signs of bubbling paint, surface rust, panels that don't line up properly and fluid leaks. Don't underestimate a tired or incomplete cabin, either.

THE TEST DRIVE

Insist on a test drive – you need to be able to check the steering, braking and transmission for yourself, so be prepared to walk away from a vendor who isn't prepared to let you do that. Be sure to drive the car from cold; plenty of sellers take vehicles out beforehand to warm them up before a potential buyer arrives, so let it cool down first. Flick the ignition off and start it up again on a test drive to help discern if there are any issues with the ignition system. On the test drive you're listening for knocks and shudders from the suspension, brakes that pull to either side, grind or lack response, sloppiness in the steering and a clutch or transmission that's notchy, jumps out of gear or is reluctant to engage.

SEAL THE DEAL

Be polite – a courteous 'Can I make you an offer?' is often all that's needed to gauge whether the seller is happy to talk prices. Coming across as rude or dismissive, no matter how many other similarly priced classics you might have already seen, will get you nowhere. Offering to pay in cash can help sweeten the deal, so it can be used as a bargaining chip when you're haggling. Remember to leave your hormones at home, too; it's easy to get caught up in the excitement of buying a new classic car, but get too carried away and the want-one factor will mean you end up paying over the odds.

BMW 316/318 (E30) (1982-91)

WHAT TO PAY £1500-4000

We're looking specifically here at the four-cylinder four-door saloons with automatic transmission – the spec that offers the most value for money. The two-door, six-pot 325i manual may be the ultimate driving machine, but can easily sell for over £25k in Sport guise. A 316i, on the other hand, sold in Mathewsons' Classic Cars sale last month for £3538.

Chris Hope

TOYOTA SUPRA MkIII (A70) (1986-93)

WHAT TO PAY £2000-12,000

With Supra mania re-ignited by the divisive MkV and a manufacturer-backed spares programme on the way for the MkIV, prices are slowly rising for the rest of the Supra line.

Budget at least £2700 for a Turbo – achieved by H&H last year for a 1991 car – rising to as much as £12k for an immaculate post-facelift example at Brightwells in March 2019.

Jon Burgess

JAGUAR X-TYPE (2001-09)

WHAT TO PAY £2000-7000

The Jaguar for people who didn't like Jaguars didn't tempt as many people away from BMW and Audi as the Premier Automotive Group wanted – but to dismiss it as 'a posh Mondeo' when fewer than seven per cent of its components are shared is more than a little unfair. Rust-prone sills and plummeting second-hand values have kept leggy examples cheap, but the 2.5- and 3.0-litre all-wheel drive models will keep a contemporary Impreza honest in the bends. The mild-mannered, greatly misunderstood (and front-wheel-drive only) 2.1-litre V6 models remain cheap if you can find them; leggy 2.0- and 2.2-litre diesels with bad fuel pumps can still be had for well under £1000. Low mileage, post-2008 facelift 2.2-litre oil-burning estates and 3.0-litre wagons remain the most sought-after; the latter is a National Trust Impreza with very little of the stigma. Jon Burgess

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND 2009 JAGUAR X-TYPE 2.2 SPORT PREMIUM, £3995

Last-of-the line X-Type with quilted leather – an expensive option at the time. With 104k on the clock, it's got a lot more life left in it.

TRIUMPH MAYFLOWER (1949-53)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-5000

Quirky looks have undoubtedly kept values down and an early Morris Minor is arguably better to drive, but the Mayflower is a decent little car once you've got to grips with the column gear-change and the plodding sidevalve engine. Despite that pedestrian performance the body roll is almost hilarious, but – and it's a big 'but' – it has shedloads of character, and that's no bad thing.

Richard Barnett

FORD CORTINA MkIV/80 2.0 (1976-83)

WHAT TO PAY £1300-8500

The people who were really in charge of whether Ford lived or died wore shiny suits, smoked Player's No.6 and kept sample cases in the boot. The fleet market was everything, so Ford effectively just put a more modern body on top of the old running gear when the Cortina MkIII finally died. The resultant MkIV dominated the sales charts and while the 80 (not 'MkV') was even less of a leap over its predecessor, it only ceded its number one slot during its final year of production. ACA sold a 1981 2.0 GL 80 earlier this year for just over £5400 and a smart Ghia MkIV for a few hundred quid more back in November. Bargains, both.

Mike Le Caplain

DAIHATSU FOURTRAK (1984-2002)

WHAT TO PAY £1500-6750

There's no reason for Fourtrak values to be as low as they are, but plenty of farmers weren't wrong, and many continue to use them because they are so reliable. They're well put together, powerful and usable, and values will rise – gently – as numbers diminish.

Richard Barnett

VOLVO 740 (1982-92)

WHAT TO PAY £500-3500

All of the determinedly square Volvo estates (240/740/940) have become hot property in recent times and even the normally-aspirated cars are attracting increased attention, with condition trumping mileage. Mathewsons just sold a 112,000-mile 740GLE 2.3 for £3763 – almost double its estimate.

Russ Smith

HONDA PRELUDE MkIV (1991-96)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-4000

That the fourth-gen Prelude broke with the model's history in terms of its styling seems to have held values down, but these are also the best driver's cars of all the Preludes, with better weight distribution than its successor and VTEC power.

Charlie Calderwood

NSU PRINZ 4 (1961-73)

WHAT TO PAY £2000-4500

The Prinz is quite nippy, despite its 598cc twin engine, and offers good handling plus an all-synchro 'box. Yet it is largely overlooked, with just 38 on the DVLA's books. It won't cost a fortune, though – SWVA sold one in its January 2019 sale for just £3000.

Chris Hope

BMW 3 SERIES (E36) (1990-2000)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-7000

With the exception of the M3, the E36 has long been the cheapest 3 Series. Prices are now finally coming up, however, with top-spec 328i coupés already getting pricey, but there are still bargains throughout the range.

Charlie Calderwood

LAND ROVER DISCOVERY (1989-98)

WHAT TO PAY £300-7000

Even Land Rover couldn't have foreseen the Disco's enduring popularity, bridging as it did the gap between the Defender and Range Rover. Collectors switched on to the original some while back, boosting values (though projects can still be had for a few hundred quid), but the smart money, goes on the tweaked post-1994 models, which command rather less. Brightwells' loaded low-mileage V8 auto went for just £6.5k in May 2017.

Mike Le Caplain

MG TF (2002-2005)

WHAT TO PAY £1500-4000

I couldn't believe I could buy this sporty little roadster for under £2000, especially after driving one. Personally, I prefer the MX-5 a little more for the drive, but for comfort and aesthetics, MG's two-seater wins me over. Once in the driver's seat I was amazed at how simple it felt to control and how quick it feels. The car felt eager to please, and cornering is great fun. Maintenance can be an issue with the engine being not easy to access. The cylinder head gasket is infamous for failing so it's good to check when it was last replaced. But if you can keep on top of essential jobs then owning MG's final sports car hurrah will be great fun.

James Sadlier

JENSEN-HEALEY (1972-76)

WHAT TO PAY £350-9000

A rakish two-seater roadster packing Lotus twin-cam power should have spent its entire life beating off salivating customers with a sharp stick. Challenging styling and industrial unrest soon put paid to that, however, despite the brilliant handling. The best UK auction result for one in recent years was the £9k that H&H managed in April last year.

Mike Le Caplain

VAUXHALL VIVA HC (1970-79)

WHAT TO PAY £1500-3500

The third-gen Viva came in a bewildering number of variants, including the 1.8- and 2.3-litre Magnum, Capri-rivalling Firenza and Firenza Droop-Snoot. The smallest-engined HC saloons (with 1.1- and 1.2-litre OHV 'fours') are the cheapest, but the 1.8-litre OHC should fall within our suggested budget and be a lot more usable and enjoyable to drive.

Chris Hope

VOLVO 480 (1986-96)

WHAT TO PAY £750-5000

Deranged electrics and pop-up headlights were all part of the charm of Volvo's Dutch-made, Renault-powered front-wheel-drive hatch. Very early cars tend to stay with Volvo collectors; the cheapest models remain the pre-facelift 1.7-litre S and ES models, which can be had for as little as £750, as fetched by Charterhouse recently for a sound 1992 1.7-litre car with just 8000 miles on the clock.

VAUXHALL CALIBRA (1989-97)

WHAT TO PAY £1200-5500

The Calibra's handsome styling helped to bolster sales in the face of third-gen Cavalier underpinnings that were hardly the stuff of driving dreams, even in Turbo, 4x4 and V6 guises. However, that means that prices are jaw-droppingly low today; Bonhams MPH sold a mint, low-mileage 1996 Turbo 4x4 on 26 November last year for just £5400.

Mike Le Caplain

JAGUAR XJ6 (X300) (1994-97)

WHAT TO PAY £1500-7500

The X300 is essentially a comprehensive rethink of the previous XJ40 and was the first XJ built under Ford ownership. Ford brought with it big investment and much improved build quality, but X300s are still really cheap, despite being quite rare (they were only made for four years). And I ought to know, because I've just invested my own money in a '97 3.2 Sport...

Mike Le Caplain

BMC 1100/1300 (1963-74)

WHAT TO PAY £2500-6000

If we said we could show you a more comfortable, slightly larger Mini, wouldn't you be interested? 1300s in particular are fantastic to drive, yet only the Vanden Plas models have seen much in the way of price rises in the past decade. A sound, low-mileage Austin 1300 fetched just £3,498 at ACA's November 2019 sale, proving excellent examples with good spec can still be found for well under £5k.

Charlie Calderwood

SAAB 900 (1978-93)

WHAT TO PAY £650-9000

Values have risen by up to 40 per cent in the last year. The best Turbos are close to five figures – ACA sold a rare Carlsson for £14,200 last August – though good non-turbos are rising fastest at the moment. CCA got £4662 for a 72,600-mile 900i back in June and cars like that will soon top the £5k mark.

Russ Smith

TRIUMPH TOLEDO (1970-76)

WHAT TO PAY £1000-5000

Dolly Sprint aside, most Triumph saloons descended from the 1300 offer a lot of fun for the money and the Toledo is one of the best of the lot; even smart examples rarely make more than £4k at auction – ACA sold a runner last August for just £925.

BUYING AT AUCTION

STICK TO A BUDGET

It's all too easy for newcomers to end up in a bidding frenzy and end up paying more than they intended. Always set a budget, but with the caveat of adjusting that budget up or down depending on the car's condition. Never go above your limit and if you think you might, take a friend along to tell you to stop.

UNDERSTAND THE FEES BEFOREHAND

The car is yours as soon as the hammer falls – the next thing to do is pay. Most auctioneers will accept a credit or debit card up to £7500, or you can pay with cash. When you pay, on top the hammer price (what the car made from the bidding) you will have to pay a buyer's commission, which varies between auctioneers but can be from six to 15 per cent, and the buyer's commission is subject to 20 per cent VAT. Bear these extra sums in mind when you're working your budget out.

HOW TO BID

The traditional way to put in a bid is to register beforehand – and you'll usually need to buy a copy of the auctioneer's catalogue in order to enter a sale. However, the beauty of the internet means that remote bidding is far easier than it used to be, and an increasing number of people are buying a car without actually seeing it. Being able to see pictures on the auctioneer's website helps matters considerably but, if you can't make it, contact the auctioneer for a walk-around description. It might not be as good as being there, but it's better than nothing. Remote bidding means either being on the telephone while the car's going under the hammer, or bidding online. Some bidders prefer internet bidding to using the telephone – others prefer the telephone because it's more immediate and you're closer to the action. Remember that with online bidding there is an extra fee in addition to the buyer's premium.

BUYING GUIDE

£2k TEUTONIC TUSSLE

German hatchbacks don't get much more fun – or affordable – than this

Things became rather tricky for Volkswagen during the early Nineties, having single-handedly founded the hot hatch concept with the original Golf GTI in the Seventies and then cemented its place in drivers' affections with the MkII during the Eighties.

The market had become crowded by the time the third-generation GTI arrived in the early Nineties and almost every global manufacturer had its own hot hatch – case in point, BMW of all marques, attempting to muscle in on this lucrative sector with its 3 Series Compact.

Uncompromising competition served to highlight that the Golf GTI MkIII was a little underwhelming, largely as a result of VW's decision to produce a more grown-up hot hatch that was bigger and safer but also a bit slower than many had hoped.

Likewise, not everyone was a fan of the 3 Series Compact's abrupt rear styling, meaning that most traditional BMW enthusiasts stuck to the saloons and coupés.

Today they remain under-the-radar Nineties classics and as such offer stupendous value for money while at the same time – and just as importantly – being great fun to drive.

Starting with the BMW, the UK never got the six-cylinder 323Ti that was offered in other markets, but you'll easily get a four-pot 316Ti or 318Ti with a budget of £2000 or less, with or without a manual gearbox.

There's also a hierarchy within the Golf GTI stable, with prices of models today mirroring their positioning in the pecking order. A VR6 is over budget, though you might get lucky and find a GTI 16v for less than £2000. An eight-valver is a dead cert.

Which of our overlooked pair you go for depends on your own preference – CCW's Events Editor Charlie Calderwood opted for the BMW, but for some only a Golf GTI will do.

WORDS Chris Randall and Chris Hope
PHOTOGRAPHY Laurens Parsons

HAS IT BEEN CRASHED?

The MkIII is prone to rust, especially around the lower part of the front wings where they meet the sills. Also check the sills themselves, the door bottoms, tailgate and around the windscreen. Plastic wheel arch mouldings can hide rot, and it can also appear around the sunroof. The water-based paint wasn't all that durable, so look for evidence of a respray. Check the history for signs of previous accident damage; walk away from anything with ripples in the front inner wings or boot floor.

CHECK THE ABS IS WORKING

Replacing worn front strut top mounts and rear axle bushes isn't a deal-breaker, but we'd recommend using Powerflex's polyurethane items – a complete front and rear kit is around £240. Brakes can suffer from seized rear calipers and ABS problems can get expensive if a new pump or ECU is needed; specialists can overhaul them, but make sure that the warning light comes on and goes out correctly. Check the PAS rack and pump for fluid leaks and listen for droning rear wheel bearings.

DOES IT RATTLE AT LOW REVS?

Engine management woes or (on 16-valves) failing coil packs cause a smoky exhaust and poor running. A fresh cambelt every 40k miles is recommended. The VR6 engine suffers from oil leaks and there's the risk of cylinder head gasket failure. Timing chains need renewing every 80k miles – this gearbox out job can result in a four-figure bill; a rattle at low revs is the giveaway. VR6s need a healthy cooling system, so proper coolant strength is vital to prevent corrosion of the alloy cylinder heads.

CHECK ANY MODIFICATIONS

The GTI 16v and VR6 respond well to having a freer breathing exhaust and intake (£600). The R32 MkIV's 3.2-litre V6 will drop straight into a MkIII and is more powerful and less prone to corrosion than the MkIII's 2.8 – budget £1500. In addition, the Golf MkIV's larger front brake discs will fit MkIIIs fitted with 16-inch wheels with only very minor modifications. Fancy lower suspension? We'd recommend KW's coilover kit – £700-1300, depending on the level of adjustability needed.

CHECK INSIDE FOR LEAKS

Scrutinise the electrics after checking the seats and controls for wear. Faulty windows, sunroof, alarm and air conditioning aren't uncommon – and, in the case of the latter, is expensive to rectify so do ensure that it works. Lift the carpets and check for damp – this can enter the cabin as a result of failed screen seals. Likewise, ensure that water hasn't been leaking into the boot. Finally, make sure that the headlining isn't sagging – and remember that the dashboard is unique to the Compact.

GIVE THE ENGINE SOME TLC

Unlike the M40 four-cylinder engines fitted to early examples of the E36 saloons, which had timing belts, the M43 engines in the Compact had chains – so no worries about bent valves. It is, though, a good idea to treat engines to annual oil and coolant changes to prevent premature wear and overheating. A long cranking time is likely a result of a faulty fuel tank lifter pump. Gearboxes generally last well, but the propshaft coupling often needs replacing. Budget £150 fitted.

BEAT THE GROT

Watch for corrosion afflicting the edges of the front wings, plus the front and rear wheelarches. Also check that bubbling around the edges of the plastic body trim isn't a sign of more serious rot beneath. Rust can affect both ends of the sills, plus the front sections of the floorpan and the jacking points. Examine the shell for signs of accident damage; even smart-looking examples can hide all manner of crash and theft-related skulduggery.

WHAT TWEAKS DOES IT HAVE?

With the M3 acting as the halo car for the E36-gen 3 Series, there are quite a few options available if you're looking to make modifications. It's generally agreed that the E36 needed a stiffer front end, so installing an under-engine X-brace, as fitted to convertible E36s, is a great idea. The E36 straddled the era when air conditioning became standard, so while many early cars don't have it, the parts needed to equip your car with air-con are plentiful and cheap. It's a surprising number of bits, however.

MERCEDES-BENZ CL (C215) (1998-2006)

WHAT TO PAY £2000-20,000

Following on from the C140, the C215 gained in looks but arguably lost in quality – something that, due to its complexity, puts off many who might otherwise be tempted by this handsome two-door. Airmatic suspension and Active Body Control systems can cause problems, but for the determined (or should that be brave?) they can be immensely rewarding to own.

Richard Barnett

GILBERN INVADER (1969-74)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-6500

All too often, classics don't enjoy popularity for one reason – 'enthusiasts' haven't heard of them. Most know what a Reliant Scimitar is, but fewer will know what an Invader is. But look at it as a junior Bristol and not only does it make sense, it offers great value. The Invader's looks might not appeal to everyone, and the Gilbern name lacks bragging rights for some. But it's those 'experts' who are missing out.

Richard Barnett

RILEY 1.5/WOLSELEY 1500 (1957-65)

WHAT TO PAY £2500-15,000

The plusher, Minor-derived Riley 1.5 and Wolseley 1500 have seen slight value rises in the past few years but they're still nowhere near the sums paid for Farina models or Morris Minors in excellent order, for that matter. To an extent both Riley and Wolseley models fall between two camps – not as 'everyman' as a Minor but not as well equipped as some of the larger BMC models. Size might also play a part in that, but while Riley Elfs and Wolseley Hornets continue their popularity growth, the 1.5 and 1500 trail behind. There's no denying just how strong a following any BMC model generates but these two haven't yet grabbed the imagination as much as the Mini- and Farina-based models, which is a pity. Good for buyers, though.

MITSUBISHI 3000GT (1990-2000)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-10,000

Four-wheel-drive, four-wheel-steering, a brace of turbochargers and a sonorous three-litre V6 – and yet the 3000GT can still be snapped up for a fraction of what a similar condition 968, RX-7 or Supra fetches. We reckon that the market's lukewarm attitude to the 3000GT and a steady supply of its JDM cousin, the GTO, are what's keeping values down, but that means that you get a lot of car for the money – all the ones we've seen for sale lately are well below the £10k mark.

David Simister

NISSAN 300ZX Z32 (1990-96)

WHAT TO PAY £3500-12,000

The 300ZX Z32 may have been a serious GT challenger to the Porsche 944/968 but the contemporary market never really wanted to pay Porsche money for a GT with a Nissan badge, regardless of how good it was. UK sales were infrequent, but at least as many grey import Fairlady Zs, with different spec to UK 300ZXs, are now in the country. All UK cars were twin turbos; naturally-aspirated Fairlady's normally start at less than their British equivalent, especially autos. Reckon on around £3500 for a rough Fairlady and £10,000+ for an excellent 300ZX TT.

Jon Burgess

VANDEN PLAS 4-LITRE R (1964-68)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-9000

The intention and execution were good, but somehow the 4-litre R just didn't cut the mustard in still socially cleaved 1960s Britain. Buyers could see that this wasn't a Rolls-Royce or Bentley, despite the attractive looks and cossetting interior, and prudent toffs often opted for a Rover 3-litre saloon instead. The result? Not many sold, but today's rarity has yet to translate into stratospheric values.

Richard Barnett

RANGE ROVER (1970-95)

WHAT TO PAY £4000-15,000

We've talked before about the second-generation P38a models being around for sub-£1500 prices, but it's also worth bearing in mind that you can still snap up a Classic-shape model for less than some armchair pundits would have you believe. Unless you want a really early car or an immaculate example, you can still get two-doors for less than £10,000 if you're patient – Charterhouse sold one for £4000 last July, while Mathewsons hammered another away for £4838 the same month. The choice is even wider with four-doors, but take sellers asking the earth for them with a pinch of salt.

David Simister

TVR WEDGES (1980-91)

WHAT TO PAY £3500-£10,000

You're unlikely to land a 420 SEAC at bargain prices, but shop around and there are still plenty of temptingly-priced 'Wedge' TVRs out there. The earlier Tasmins, in particular, can still be snapped up for well below £5000 –

Charterhouse sold a V6-engined 1981 convertible for £3600 last year, and if you insist on TVRs having V8 muscle then it's worth bearing in mind that Mathewsons hammered away a 350i convertible for £4838 last year. They're half the price of what a decent Chimaera costs... and a lot rarer.

David Simister

SE5/5a models, are starting to creep up as more people cotton on to how undervalued they've been for years, but there are still plenty of bargains to be had on the later variants. You can still

RELIANT SCIMITAR GTE (1968-86)

HUMBER SUPER SNIPE I-VA (1945-52)

WHAT TO PAY £2500-9000

Big and comfortable with a hint of 1955 Chevrolet about it, there's much to like about the Snipe and its plusher Super Snipe sibling. But Rootes Group cars remain the preserve of the informed and not the easily led. Perhaps it's to do with those looks, or the fact that they haven't received as much media exposure over the years as contemporary rivals.

Richard Barnett

AUSTIN 3-LITRE (1967-71)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-6500

A brave, but ultimately futile attempt to move the Austin name more upmarket, and frighteningly small sales showed that the British public could see through the BL social-climbing hype. By the late-1970s many were already in scrapyards, but today British enthusiasts like an underdog and this car definitely deserves that moniker. Undervalued today because it's still misunderstood – and plenty of people don't know what it is.

CCW'S BUYING TIPS: WHERE TO FIND CLASSICS

ON THE INTERNET

There are plenty of places where you can find classics being advertised for sale online – and we'd recommend our sister site Classic Cars For Sale (classiccarsforsale.co.uk) as a great starting point. The advantage with online listings is that you can look through a detailed description and a set of photographs without even leaving the comfort of your own house – but do your homework first and avoid cars wearing suspiciously low prices that are too good to be true, because there are plenty of scammers out there, too.

AT A CAR SHOW

This can be a great way of seeing the latest classics being offered. Not only do plenty of dealers set up stands at shows across the UK, but many shows also have a section dedicated to cars being sold privately. The prices for the latter in particular often throw up some good deals, but be aware that you might not necessarily be able to drive the car during the show itself – it's worth asking the seller if they're happy for you to view (and test drive it) at a later date. Check out the public car parks; often visitors use these as a shop window for their cars, too.

RIGHT HERE IN CCW!

Don't forget to flick through our classifieds ads pages every week because they're packed with tempting deals on classics that are being sold across the UK. This is where you'll be able to find the latest bargains – from sub-£1k buys like Rover Metros and Ford Probes, to freshly restored Austin-Healeys and Jaguar E-types, not to mention more exotic-still modern classics – and we always have a weekly set of reviews – Chasing Cars – see pages 81-87 of this issue – where our experts have driven and examined classic cars that are currently for sale.

100 UNDERVALUED & UNDERRATED CLASSICS

VOLKSWAGEN SCIROCCO MkII (1981-92)

WHAT TO PAY £2500-6000

Only a legendary car like the Golf GTI could continually eclipse the values of an identical driving and arguably better-looking coupé like the Scirocco. For whatever reason, Sciroccos have always been cheaper than equivalent Golfs – but that market oddity can be your gain, allowing you a lower, lighter and cheaper entry into the GTI driving experience, all with DeLorean-aping looks. Values have been picking up recently, but only as MkII Golf values have been doing the same. It's worth waiting for a fuel-injected car to come along, though; they don't cost much more and are faster, more reliable and more economical.

Charlie Calderwood

ALFA ROMEO 1750/2000 BERLINA (1968-77)

WHAT TO PAY £4500-10,000

So underappreciated that they are often confused for the similar-looking Giulia saloons, the 1750/2000 Berlina's offer one of the best-value tickets into classic Alfa ownership. They are drastically cheaper than an equivalent Giulia coupé, but too many buyers are put off by the Berlina's extra doors which, while of course adding some weight, still do not make them heavy cars; they weigh in at just over a ton. A 2000 Berlina was last sold at auction in the UK – at Brightwells in September 2018 – for £6050, showing just how rare, but also good value, these cars are. Charlie Calderwood

SUZUKI CAPPUCCINO (1991-98)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-6000

Japan's Kei cars have always been treated with suspicion on the rare occasions that they have made their way to Britain – their tiny size and tiny engines can't make for a proper sports car, surely? Detractors would do well to remember however, that the Cappuccino's power output is the same as that of a Mini Cooper and it weighs only marginally more. Prices have started to go up recently thanks to demand from the US now that they have reached the magic 25-year mark, but they are still the cheapest of the 1990s Kei sports cars. A clean example with 50,000 miles on the clock sold for £4408 at Mathewsons' March 2019 sale, proving that those who can ignore the small power figure can pick up a Cappuccino for MX-5 MkI money, and have a car that drives even better, being much closer to the feel of the Lotus Elans and MG Midgets that inspired the ubiquitous Mazda.

Charlie Calderwood

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND

CCW'S BUYING TIPS: HOW TO AVOID SCAMS

SOMETHING'S OFF...

Beware the classic car with the suspiciously low price – the world of bargain-priced classics is also prime hunting ground for scammers looking to take advantage of naïve buyers.

Your best protection is doing your homework beforehand and making sure that you're familiar with the values of the particular model you're after – you'll still find Triumph TR7s languishing in sub-£5k territory but a pristine TR6 being hawked for about the same money should immediately ring alarm bells...

We keep a very close eye on our classified ads to weed out scammers before they make it into print – but do get in touch with us immediately if you come across one. It could prevent a fellow classic fan from losing a small fortune.

WHY CAN'T I SEE THE CAR?

We've heard plenty of tales of sellers who are happy to give you tempting-sounding details over the phone or by email, but who are less forthcoming about letting you actually see the car. This is something that's particularly prevalent in online auctions, where fake sellers take the images and descriptions of genuine cars and relist them. Be wary of 'too good to be true' listings from sellers with a new account; you might find that the account and the listing are swiftly deleted.

Other things to watch out for are sellers insisting on a deposit being paid up front before you're allowed to view the car, or wanting to do the deal in car parks, laybys or motorway service areas despite supposedly living nearby.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU ARE SCAMMED

The key here is to keep a record of how the car was described by the seller and to make any complaints about it not being as described in writing. Simply saying 'sold as seen' isn't necessarily enough to protect a seller if a classic isn't as advertised. Should you buy a restored classic for half the typical restoration cost, it may be argued that you could not expect it to be in A1 condition (unless the car was advertised as such) and a reasonable person should expect to budget for repair work other than routine maintenance.

However, should you find that the car was dangerous and unroadworthy within a very short period of ownership, and zero defects are disclosed in the advert, you would likely have a much stronger case.

TRIUMPH DOLOMITE 1500 & 1850 (1972-80)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-5000

The hype surrounding the Dolomite Sprint unfairly draws attention away from the Dolomite 1500 and 1850, which are enjoyable sporting saloons in their own right and are less of a headache to maintain, too. The 1500HL and 1850HL in particular offer 99 per cent of the Sprint's good looks and driving experience for far less money. Despite their age and rarity, these Dolomites still aren't worth much, with a good, but not immaculate 1850HL fetching £3360 at Brightwells' September 2019 auction.

Charlie Calderwood

FORD CAPRI MkIII 1.6-2.0 (1974-86)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-8000

Four-cylinder Capris have always been hit with the 'sheep in wolf's clothing' criticism, but as long as you're paying a fair bit less than you would for the faster versions, what's wrong with that? Cortinas don't get the same stick, and a Cortina in an awesome-looking coupé body sounds a great idea to us. The 2.0 in particular offers enough performance to at least keep you entertained, helped in no small part by the Capri's delightfully old-fashioned handling. Underrated because of most buyers' V6 obsession, a four-cylinder Capri is well worth the money if you appreciate it for what it is, not what other models are. Oh, and it's easy to make them go a bit faster too, if you do decide that you'd like a bit more poke.

Charlie Calderwood

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND 1978 FORD CAPRI, £6000

RELIANT SCIMITAR GTC (1980-85)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-9000

Triumph Stag production had ended by the time Reliant's similar T-bar Targa-roofed GTC hit the showrooms (sadly, for Tamworth's marque, right in the middle of a recession). With Ford Cologne power it, much like its GTE stablemates, should be a lot more popular than it is in reality – try finding a Stag for the price we're suggesting here! One sold for £5280 in Barons July 2019 Summer Classic sale – that really is incredible value.

Chris Hope

LOTUS EXCEL (1982-92)

WHAT TO PAY £3500-10,000

Lightweight, world-class handling and fiery twin-cam engine? It's hard to understand why Excels aren't worth more, particularly considering the pretty car that Lotus managed to make out of the slightly awkward Eclat. The mid-engined Esprit is the elephant in the room of course, sucking up the big money for wedgy Lotuses, but it is a shame that the Excel gets overlooked as a result. Like many Lotuses, the car ends up in the 'wouldn't touch it with a barge pole' pile for many enthusiasts because of fear of unreliability. While it is no Toyota Corolla, it does come with some Toyota bits thanks to Hethel's association with the Japanese giant in the 1980s – including the gearbox and the pop-up headlamps.

Charlie Calderwood

FORD FOCUS ST170 (2002-05)

WHAT TO PAY £200-6000

Remember when you could pick up Escort XR3is for a fraction of what they cost today? That's the territory the ST170 treads today – the classic market's already pushing up Focus RS prices, but you can still pick up decent examples of its more understated ST sibling for well under £3000. For that you get excellent handling and 171bhp, but if anything, its restrained looks count against it here.

David Simister

AUSTIN-HEALEY SPRITE MkII-IV (1961-71)

WHAT TO PAY £4000-7500

There's more to a classic sports car than what its bonnet looks like and while there's no arguing with the fact that the earliest version of the Sprite, with its 'Frogeye' front, is one of Britain's most beloved roadsters, today it costs more than twice as much as any of the Sprites that followed. Proving this point is the fact that Mathewsons sold a 1969 MkIV Sprite in its December 2019 sale for £3978 while Brightwells sold a 'Frogeye' for a very reasonable £10,976 a month earlier – it's by no means unusual to see them sell for over £20,000. You get a lot more practicality at the expense of those characterful looks, though, and in the case of the MkIV, the 1275cc A-series engine. It's a no-brainer for us – the Sixties Sprites are unquestionably the ones to buy.

CASH-FREE CLASSICS

TRIUMPH TR7 (1974-81)

The TR7 may be less adored than earlier TRs, but even the very best are still very affordable Dismissing the TR7 for its awkward rear styling or 'mere' four-cylinder engine is to do this highly under-appreciated classic a great injustice. The TR7 isn't the only bargain sub-£5k sporting classic around, but it's certainly one of the most striking. It's also highly usable without running the risk of spoiling its residual value. It is, in short, a great cash-free classic.

It oozes a different sort of character from its hallowed predecessors from behind the wheel, but there's plenty of it, and those earlier TRs will cost you many thousands more.

You get a deeply stylish and snug-fitting interior, perfect for cossetting you and your lucky passenger during weekends away. But the even better news is that not much money can buy you something that's really been cared for. TR7s often excite deep devotion from their owners, perhaps because of their underdog status. This trumps any concerns you might have about build quality because any niggles arising from manufacturing flaws will have been ironed out by now and later cars fared better on that front anyway.

Despite values picking up a little, roadworthy examples can still be had less than £3k, but they are likely to need fairly steep expenditure. Given that even a clean example with thousands spent on it might only cost £6k, there's little to be gained from scrimping. The route to a proper 'cash-free' TR7, then, is definitely to buy the best that you can afford.

Theo Ford-Sagers

WHAT TO PAY
£2-8k

CHECK THE ENGINE'S HEALTH

Warping of the aluminium cylinder head is a primary concern, so coolant condition should be inspected; signs of oil/coolant contamination are a serious matter. Engine swaps are popular, including Dolomite units and Rover V8s; judge each on its own merits.

HOW'S THE TRANSMISSION?

The 1978-on five-speed 'box is stronger than the earlier four-speed, which can jump out of gear on the overrun. Hard acceleration can cause the five-speed to rattle if its low on oil and a sticky clutch is a sure sign of under use – what else might you need to recommission it?

CHECK CAREFULLY FOR RUST

Wings and inner arches suffer, as do the headlamp pods. The inner and outer sills are also notorious. Rust around the windscreen is very expensive to restore, so avoid. Rear suspension arm mounts accumulate dirt, so these need checking for structural rot, too.

HOW'S THE HEADLINING?

Cars with a Webesto roof have wooden frames that rot easily and repairs are costly, so a TR7 with a stained headlining is unlikely to be 'cash-free'. Watch out for water leaks from dropheads or sunroofs; they'll invisibly rot floors and wiring, so be very cautious if you find damp.

HAS IT BEEN LAID UP?

Many are laid up for winter, so there's a risk of brakes seizing. Steering vibration at speed can be tricky to diagnose, so assess it on your test drive. Suspension issues aren't common, but there are plenty of upgrade kits, so quiz the seller about what's been fitted.

WHAT WE RECKON

RUSS SMITH CONTRIBUTOR

'Long the black sheep of the TR family, the TR7 is crazily cheap, even in soft-top form – a quarter of the value of TR6s. But now's the time to snap up a good one because the tide is starting to turn, with buyers looking for Seventies chic. Classic Car Auctions got £10,100 for a coupé in October, but it had only done 24k miles. More normal is the £2886 for a smart 1980 Convertible in the same sale.'

ALFA ROMEO SPIDER SERIES 3 (1982-90)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-15,000

If the front-wheel-drive 916 Alfa Spider doesn't do it for you, then this is the best value routes into owning one of the rear-drive models. The Series 3 – the one which was never officially imported into the UK – sits between the more sought-after older models and the runout S4 that was given Alfa UK's full support, which has hampered values. As a result, you can pick up decent S3s from around £4500 – around £2000-3000 cheaper than an S4 in the same condition, and considerably lower than what you'd pay for a Sixties or Seventies model. The wider market's loss is your gain here.

David Simister

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND

1986 ALFA ROMEO SPIDER, NO RESERVE

Being a no-reserve car, there's definitely the potential for a bargain price here. We'd keep an eye on it, and if it doesn't sell, get in touch – it may be that there's a post-sale bargain to be had.

Brightwells, 01568 611166, brightwells.com, 4 March

Image: Stuart Collins.

PORSCHE 928 (1977-95)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-12,000

What's the 928, for all the talk of later variants fetching £30k+ results at auction, doing here? Well, once you take all of the S4 and GTS models out of the equation, they're still selling for less than most Porsche fans realise – ACA sold a neat 1982 982S back in January for less than £10k, and we've seen plenty of other early models being advertised for £6000-8000. With the exception of the really late models, it still trails same-era 911s by a long way price-wise.

David Simister

JAGUAR XJ-S (PRE-HE) (1975-81)

WHAT TO PAY £6000-12,000

It's fair to say that the XJ-S is a car that became better with age, a six-cylinder engine and convertible being added to the range later in life. However, the earliest cars from the Seventies can be considered the real bargains of the range, complete with 5.3-litre V12 in all its thirsty glory. These pre-HE XJ-S coupés can still be had for four-figures and so are worth keeping an eye out for when they do appear for sale.

Chris Hope

LOTUS SEVEN S4 (1970-73)

WHAT TO PAY £7500-10,000

By attempting to appeal to a greater number of buyers, a lot of the qualities that made the earlier incarnations of the Seven so popular had been dialled out of the S4. The looks of that glassfibre shell are divisive for starters, plus it's softer and more civilised than previous Sevens, but that's not to say that it's not fun to drive, because it most certainly is – that it's a third of the price of the late Fifties and Sixties Sevens, though, is what makes one of these cars really tempting.

Chris Hope

MERCEDES-BENZ SL (R129) (1989-2001)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-12,000

Now this really is a head-scratcher. How can a car this desirable be this cheap when its predecessor is still so expensive? Take the 1998 SL320 that CCA sold back in December. 220bhp. Popular colour (Azurite Blue). Just serviced and MoT'd. Low-ish miles (90,000). Factory hard-top. Price? Just over £5k. Which, frankly, is bonkers. Engine and trim options are bewildering, but the post-98 SL 320 V6 is arguably the sweet spot.

Mike Le Caplain

BENTLEY MULSANNE TURBO & TURBO R (1982-98)

WHAT TO PAY £7500-15,000

When searching for a Bentley Turbo, what becomes apparent is that there are a lot more examples of the later Turbo R for sale than there are of the Mulsanne Turbo. The Turbo R benefits from a much greater production run and is the car that collectors have latched on to thanks to the uprated suspension that puts the car in the same category as a lot of the top-end sports saloons of its era. As such, the original Turbo has been overlooked, and yet it still promises a fantastic drive and almost 300bhp. The price we've suggested relates to the fact that you really should be buying the best you can afford – and certainly one that's been fastidiously maintained. And yet, to prove just how much value these cars currently represent, a pair of owners snapped up their cars at auction last for £5936 in November at Morris Leslie's classic vehicle auction, and for £5565 in Anglia Car Auctions' April sale. With the best Turbo Rs selling for up to £40,000, those are amazing deals.

Chris Hope

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND

1986 Bentley Mulsanne Turbo, £10,995

Outstanding bodywork, 100,000 miles covered, new turbo, new rear suspension spheres, sold with 12 months' MoT.

Classic Car Warehouse, 01254 789850, classiccarwarehouse.co.uk

FORD MUSTANG 6-CYLINDER (1964-68)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-20,000

Yes, it's obviously nice to have a V8 under the bonnet, but you'll look just as cool in a six-pot Mustang. You also have a much better chance of getting behind the wheel because they are only worth two-thirds the price of a V8. A 1966 coupé with a solid body and sun-faded paint, used for European cruising, sold for just £8360 at Barons last December. A good buy.

Russ Smith

LOTUS ELAN +2 (1967-74)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-20,000

The original Elan is one of the all-time great driver's cars; its Plus 2 sibling is only slightly larger, almost as exciting to pilot, possibly even better looking, yet half the price. Values tend to be rock-steady, but it pays to have your Elan cared for by a Lotus specialist. There were two standout auction buys last year; the yellow 1968 +2 with recent paint and mechanical overhaul that H&H sold for £13,781 impressed, but the white, massively historied 1969 car with new chassis and rebuilt engine that ACA sold for just £10,600 in August amazed. Late ones with the (weak) five-speed gearbox are less desirable.

Russ Smith

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND 1972 LOTUS ELAN +2 130S, £15,000

Fitted with Spyder replacement chassis. Was a daily driver for ten years, now needs paint.

■ Private seller, 07974 144189, classiccarsforsale.co.uk

BENTLEY T1 (1965-77)

WHAT TO PAY £7500-25,000

Buyers preferred the Rolls Royce Silver Shadow to the T-series when new, but times change, and now there's greater demand for the Bentley. Fans will point to how the design better suits the Bentley grille and in most cases they'll be in less garish colours than their Shadow sibling, which is no bad thing. Prices are still reasonable, but it's important to remember that one of these can't be run for Jaguar XJ6 money (the cost of a brake overhaul would pay for a half-decent W124 Mercedes-Benz) and they are not immune from rust, either. But, bought correctly, there's little to beat a T1.

Richard Barnett

HERE'S ONE WE FOUND 1974 Bentley T1, £17,500

Described as being immaculate throughout. Two-tone paint adds to the appeal and it's covered just 106,000 miles

■ Silver Lady Services Limited, 01202 509146, silverladyservices.co.uk

ROVER 3-LITRE SALOON (1959-67)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-16,500

Why is the Rover 3-litre – and the saloon in particular – still undervalued? Simple – because everyone who wants a P5 wants a P5B, preferably a Coupé. Bar room experts don't like the higher roofline and refined six-pot – rather than V8 – air. With low-key looks, a fabulous interior and 'landed gentry' image, the 3-litre saloon is the king of all P5/P5Bs.

Richard Barnett

PORSCHE 911 (1996) (1997-2006)

WHAT TO PAY £9000-20,000

IMS bearing failure, blah. Water-cooled-engine-so-not-a-real-911, blah-blah. Ugly 'fried egg' headlights, blah-blah-blah. Nonsense. Fact is, a 996 is the cheapest way into a 911. Most have had the potentially catastrophic IMS issue sorted by now – avoid any that haven't – and even boggo Carreras are epic to drive. And yet Brightwells sold a stunning black C2 last November for just over £10,400...

Mike Le Caplain

MG YA/YB (1947-53)

WHAT TO PAY £3000-15,000

Prices for this smart sports saloon of the early post-war era have eased of late. Mathewson's only managed a below-estimate £8708 for a nice home-restored one last September, though asking prices in classifieds for top examples are still £13,000+. With growing interest in family classics for Goodwood and Bicester trips, we certainly don't expect values to fall any further.

Russ Smith

ARMSTRONG SIDDELEY SAPPHIRE 346/STAR SAPPHIRE (1952-60)

WHAT TO PAY £4500-13,000

For real engineering integrity, half-sensible performance and utterly delightful interiors, you should be thinking of a Siddeley every time. It's no wonder old money and senior business figures often signed on the dotted line for a Sapphire in preference to a Bentley because the whole package was just so right. And that applies today, too.

Richard Barnett

SINGER NINE ROADSTER (1939-52)

WHAT TO PAY £10,000-15,000

The Le Mans, with the 972cc engine in a higher state of tune, and more powerful-still Special Speed cars are the ones that collectors go for and as such sell for above £40,000 – especially with competition history or faultless condition on their side. However, the standard Nine Roadster offers 1930s-style fun at almost half the price you'd pay for a T-type MG. Just be patient because they don't come up for sale or at auction all that often.

Chris Hope

TOYOTA COROLLA GT AE82 (1983-87) AND GTi-16 AE92 (1987-91)

WHAT TO PAY £5000-15,000

So few of these 4-AGE engined flyers are left that accurate valuations are hard to come by – it's literally a case of whatever the market will stand. Prices of fast front-wheel-drive Corollas – the AE82 and AE92 – still pale in comparison to the earlier car's AE86 rear-wheel drive contemporary. To find a complete AE82 or 92 is a feat in itself; even rotten projects will fetch decent four figure sums. We found two AE92s online – one with a private seller, the other at a dealer – priced at £10,000 and £14,950 respectively. While the market hasn't yet peaked for these cars, demand has kept prices for the examples available high, regardless of condition.

Jon Burgess

FIAT/SEAT 600 (1955-69)

WHAT TO PAY £4000-13,000

You could be forgiven for thinking that the Fiat 500's more expensive than it is – it appears at classic sales so frequently that buyers are spoilt for choice, and as a result most tend to sell in the £4000-9000 bracket. What this is, though, is something much rarer; the 600 rarely appears at auctions or in our classified ads, but when they do, their values are usually parallel to the 500's. Better still, save the waiting and turn buying one into an adventure – we've seen plenty being sold abroad, particularly the SEAT versions at Spanish shows, at temptingly bargain prices.

David Simister

CARS FOR FOR OVER £15,000

AC 3000ME (1979-85)

WHAT TO PAY £12,000-25,000

Rather than underrated, the 3000ME could be better described as 'unknown'; many enthusiasts are unaware of AC's sole mid-engine effort. With just 100 or so built, they are rare, too, but a high proportion have survived and their stunning wedge design makes them look much more expensive than they are. Performance is only adequate, which is why prices are low compared to contemporary mid-engine cars, though the numerous turbo conversions go some way to addressing this.

Charlie Calderwood

ALFA ROMEO SZ (1989-94)

WHAT TO PAY £15,000-47,500

Bertone's radical coupé has a cult following and rarity (just over 1000 built) on its side. That keeps values firm, though they look low-ish compared to similarly left-field classics like the Montreal and Citroën SM. There are plenty of silly £60k-plus asking prices out there, but ignore those. Bonhams got a correct £43,700 for a lovely 20k-mile car last September.

Russ Smith

CHEVROLET CORVETTE STINGRAY (C3) (1969-76)

WHAT TO PAY £12,000-20,000

The C4 may be cheaper, but there are still buyers in the UK for whom the curvaceous C3 will always be the last

'real' Corvette. Look elsewhere if you want subtlety – bonnet murals and side exhausts the size of waste paper baskets are common – and decide whether you want to go classic chrome bumper (to 1974) or more integrated later plastic bumper. Either way, you'll be sitting behind a V8 the size of Kentucky and wearing a huge grin.

Mike Le Caplain

LOTUS EUROPA (1966-75)

WHAT TO PAY £14,000-25,000

The Europa is a bit of a steal compared to the Elan/Esprit and most of its Seventies rivals. Unless you're looking for one of the Twin Cam variants, you can still pick up a good Europa for well under £20k – in fact, Brightwells sold a fully restored S2 last July for £18,700, and we've seen a couple changing hands for less than that. Forget the looks – for a mid-engined Lotus with world-class handling, it's something of a bargain.

David Simister

CCW'S TOP TIPS: WHY HISTORY IS EVERYTHING

WHAT TO LOOK FOR

What you're looking for is a healthy stash of paperwork that gives you an idea of what's been spent on the car, and when. This will give you an idea of whether the seller has cherished the car; things like old MoT certificates and service receipts will help to prove that the car doesn't have a shady past. Other things to look for are pictures of the car at shows and club events, handwritten notes on repairs and photo records of restoration work – all this can add 10-20 per cent to a classic's value.

HOW LONG HAS IT BEEN STANDING?

If a car hasn't been MoT'd recently (and isn't exempt) and has been inactive for a long time, it's worth digging deeper to find out why. Have a look at old MoT certificates – it may be that a previous failure point has made the car uneconomical to repair, or that a fault flagged up by a previous advisory has worsened. Maybe the car has a genuine reason for being left alone, but it's worth checking over the tyres, brakes and electrics – and you can use it as a starting point for haggling over price.

MoT EXEMPTION

It is perfectly legal for classics more than 40 years old to have no MoT on the basis that they've been exempted – but they still need to be roadworthy. Most classic dealers sell cars that have been given MoTs on a voluntary basis but it's less clear cut with private sellers. You might get a better deal, but negotiate if you find anything amiss. Consider getting a classic-friendly garage to check a potential purchase over – it'll cost a little extra, but you could save yourself a hefty repair bill in the process.

HORSEPOWER HANGAR

1948 - Bentley Gibbs Special - The only one in the world and quite simply like nothing you've ever seen before. Powered by the legendary 6.75l V8 twin turbo charged engine, this is a unique opportunity to own a bespoke commissioned Bentley £199,995

1948 - AC Barchetta - A chance to own a part of AC history. An aluminium bodied, matching numbers car with the original chassis and 2 litre AC straight six engine. Completely nut and bolt restored over the last few years with all bodywork carried out by the renowned Lone Pine Garage £POA

1966 - Citroën 2CV Azam - With only one registered French owner and 47,000 kms from new, this wonderfully presented Azam is an excellent addition to the very best of car collections. The 2CV has also benefited from a sympathetic recommissioning in the last couple of years that saw it returned back to gleaming light grey paintwork, unmarked red cloth interior and a new hood, yet retained a lot of it's original key parts including the aluminium front grill and bakelite steering wheel £14,995

1967 - Beacham Jaguar MK2 3.4 - A matching numbers car with a wonderful history which saw it being commissioned in 1990 to be fully rebuilt and brought up to speed by Beacham cars of New Zealand. Rack and pinion power steering, Getrag 5 speed box, disc brakes on all four corners and air conditioning are a few of the upgrades to make sure the car holds its own in modern day traffic £79,995

1975 - BMW 1602 - A custom one-off metal arched car and fitted with the high revving E30 M3 S14 engine and running gear. A very mechanically sorted car that has had copious amounts spent on developing it over the last 30 years, with its debut being in Performance BMW Magazine in the early 1990s £29,995

1983 - Ford Escort RS1600i - The RS1600i is a car that is becoming harder to find in such an original and unmolested condition. Finished in black and covered just 31,000 miles in the last 37 years. With fast Ford prices going only one way, surely the MK3 is the next to rally £POA

1985 - Porsche 911 Targa 3.2 - A beautifully crafted and backdated car by Lone Pine Garage with just an incredible amount of attention to detail. A Singer inspired LHD Californian rust free car which has been tastefully brought up to speed with a retro bluetooth stereo, heated seats and air conditioning £99,995

1991 - Jaguar XJ220 - A very special car that was originally built for the Sultan of Brunei by TWR Jaguar at Oxford in 1991 and uniquely finished in Aston Martin green. The XJ220 then returned back to the UK in 2002 having only covered 1,412 miles in it's first 11 years and has subsequently only covered a total of 5,986 miles since. Peace of mind for any prospecting new owners can be found in the fact that the car has also recently returned from Jaguar Land Rover Classic where it underwent a major overhaul, including a new service and clutch at a cost of £16,000 £399,995

1994 - Porsche 928 GTS - An extremely presentable UK supplied RHD GTS finished in Slate Grey Metallic with Marble Grey and black leatherette interior. Factory fitted with the optional Sports seats, this GTS is a perfect companion for those faster paced European jaunts! A healthy history file with an abundance of invoices in recent years and a well known car within the 928 owners club £34,995

1994 - Mercedes-Benz E500 Limited - The ultimate Q car. Hand built by Porsche on behalf of Mercedes over a period of 18 days, these cars need no introduction. A German supplied car from new with full Mercedes Benz service history and in outstanding condition both mechanically and aesthetically. The car made the front cover of Modern Classics magazine in December 2019 when it was featured in a 22 page article covering the super saloon greats of the 90s £49,995

1995 - Porsche 928 GTS - An almost perfect example off the GTS finished in Polar Silver with black draped leather, wooden inlays and factory fitted with fully electric and adjustable comfort seats, top tinted windscreen, air conditioning and sensibly retro fitted with the Porsche classic radio. A UK RHD supplied car with a substantial history and wonderfully presented throughout, with a no expense spared recommissioning in the last 2,000 miles £54,995

1995 - Lamborghini Countach 5.2 V12 25th Anniversary - A late registered RHD example finished in Ballon white with Rosso leather interior and only 7,000 miles from new. An outstanding opportunity to own one of the most iconic supercars ever produced and supplied with it's original owners pack, manuals and all important service records £319,995

1997 - Porsche 993 Turbo - A UK supplied RHD car finished in Arctic silver with black leather interior. This 100% original example has 69,000 miles and is renowned as being the last of the air cooled greats with prices only set to go one way £99,995

1998 - BMW 840Ci Sport - A wonderfully presented UK supplied Individual car, which was factory finished in Estoril Blue with silver leather and blue piping. Far from the usual high ownership example, this particular car has been under the custodian of the same owner for the last 19 years with the service history being so extent, that it has exceeded the space given in its service book £16,995

1999 - Rolls Royce Silver Seraph - Impeccably presented Seraph that has just had over £7,000 spent on it bringing it up to speed, that included a set of new Avon CR227 tyres, batteries, major service and an overhaul of any perishable items to make it perfect. The cars substantial service history is made up of 18 stamps in it's booklets and has only 43,000 miles in total since the day it left the factory in Crewe £44,995

2005 - Mercedes-Benz SLK55 AMG - A modern day muscle car that needs no introduction, this virtually immaculate example of the R171 is very much a cherished example with only 45,266 miles from new. Finished in Iridium Silver with contrasting red and black nappa leather, this example also benefits from the all important air scarf, Harmon Kardon, Logic 7 surround sound and heated electric seats £17,995

2006 - TVR 350C - An exceptionally presented and low mileage example with only 8,104 miles that comes with a fully documented service history, all original book packs, plus the addition of the all important folder of supporting invoices. One of the final cars built at the Blackpool factory before its closure. Registered on 1st April 2006, this T350C was supplied new by Hexham Horseless Carriages, finished in BMW Carbon Black with a Prussian Blue and cream extended hide interior, matching navy blue carpets and air conditioning £39,995

2010 - Ferrari 612 Scaglietti One-to-One - OTO cars were specifically built to the clients tastes and this UK supplied RHD example with HGT2 handling park finished in Grigio Silverstone was certainly done tastefully. Sat on 20" Challenge alloy wheels with the F1 super fast gearbox, ceramics and an unblemished bodywork, this 14,458 mile example with full Ferrari service history is one of the final Ferrari V12 greats £119,995

2018 - Ferrari GTC4 Lusso V12 - Undoubtedly one of the highest specified examples in the country with a staggering £81,905 worth of factory optional equipment and finished in the extremely rare matt paint finish of Grigio Silverstone Opaco. In order to protect the factory paint, the Lusso was wrapped fully in the appropriate matt finish PPF by Topaz of London £POA

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO DRIVE?

This feels like a Mk2 should, with an enthusiastic murmur from the 3.8-litre straight-six, a consistent 50psi on the cruise once warmed up and no signs of misfiring or lumpy power delivery. The clutch is a little heavy but works well enough, all four gears engage with no crunching or whining and the overdrive kicks in with no hesitation. There are no clonks or rattles over potholes and the steering has a light, consistent feel with no sloppiness or signs of play. It was a little slow to start – possibly due to recent inactivity – something to check if you're taking it for a test drive.

BODYWORK CHECK

The Old English paint is in generally good order with a consistent finish and no signs of bubbling, cracks or microblistering. The chrome on the radiator grille, brightwork and bumpers is well finished, too, with no dents or signs of pitting. All the lights work correctly and aren't cracked or letting moisture in. The only real let-down are the 15-inch wire wheels, which are let down by a build-up of brake dust and grime and would benefit from further cosmetic attention. They are, however, shod with matching Mabor General tyres in good condition.

HOW'S THE INTERIOR?

This is where it's most apparent that this Jaguar has been refurbished – the red leather trim on the seats, centre console and door cards is in excellent condition throughout, with no marks, tears or creases. It's the same story with the Beechwood dashboard trim, which has an even, mark-free finish and all of the instruments and switches work as Browns Lane intended. There are some minor scratches in the wooden door cappings and some marks and discolouration to the passenger seat fold-out table, but the carpets and headlining are in good order.

UNDER THE BONNET

The double overhead-cam 'six' appears to have been well looked after, with no signs of any oil seepage and a look at the dipstick reveals that the engine oil is at the correct level, with a healthy golden colour. The car also comes with a healthy stash of paperwork, including a Jaguar Heritage certificate and a long list of old MoT certificates confirming the car's mileage. A quick flick through the receipts reveals that it's been treated to electronic ignition, polybushed suspension, a Viper ignition coil and an upgraded fuel pump.

THE CCW VIEW

There are cheaper routes into Mk2 ownership, but this is worth a look on account of the work that's already been done to it and the way it drives – and we've seen restored 3.8s advertised for a lot more. It's not entirely factory-spec, but perfect if you're looking for a Mk2 to use and enjoy regularly.

David Simister

- ✓ PROS Drives well, overall condition, history
- ✗ CONS Not one for fans of patinated originality

Excellent throughout, bar some wood trim blemishes.

3.8-litre 'six' has electronic ignition and a new fuel pump.

1991 MERCEDES-BENZ 300 SL-24 (R129)

ENGINE 2962cc/6-cyl/DOHC POWER 228bhp@6300rpm TORQUE 201lb ft@4600rpm
MAXIMUM SPEED 134mph 0-60MPH 8.6sec FUEL CONSUMPTION 19-24mpg
TRANSMISSION RWD, five-speed automatic MoT August 2020 ODOMETER 45,306 miles

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO DRIVE?

This SL is a joy to drive. The 3.0-litre 24-valve engine might lack the sheer grunt of the V8 and V12 models, but it's smooth, tractable and untemperamental. The five-speed auto is equally user-friendly, the power-assisted steering is light and precise, the brake pedal has a pleasingly progressive feel and the brakes bring the heavy SL to a halt in short order. The ride is firm but never harsh and there's a distinct absence of rattles and thumps, even on poorly metalled road surfaces.

BODYWORK CHECK

The Signal Red paint is in generally very good condition bar a scuff to one corner of the front bumper and another on one of the plastic lower side panels. The electric soft-top is in fine fettle and raises and lowers smoothly, but there is some age and use-related wear to the hardtop's seals, plus a small area of peeling lacquer. The vendor has since advised that the latter, plus the aforementioned scuffs, have now been remedied. The 16-inch alloy wheels are in good condition and shod with well-treaded 225/55 Nexen tyres.

Very good paint and bodywork

INTERIOR

MECHANICALS

Drives superbly, Clean and tidy engine bay

HOW'S THE INTERIOR?

The condition of this SL's interior certainly belies its age, an impression that's reinforced by the total absence of rattles and creaks from the trim when on the move. The seats, carpets and overmats are all in great order, with little or no wear. Stains, rips and tears are likewise noticeable only by their absence and there's no obvious evidence of past or present water ingress. The dashboard, door cards and roof linings (of both the hard and soft tops) are also in fine condition, as is the carpeted boot area. The electric windows, door mirrors and seats all work without fuss and the same is true of the switchgear and period-looking radio/cassette unit.

UNDER THE BONNET

The engine bay is clean and there's no evidence of rust or fluid leaks. No service history is available, but there are a number of MoT certificates dating back to 2008. Checking those in conjunction with the online history (from 2006 onwards) shows that the car has only covered 15,000 miles in the last 14 years, and just 750 in the past three years. Moreover, the records reveal a history of passed MoT tests, with no failures and few advisories over the same 14-year period. Given the lack of history, it's worth noting that the SL's camshafts are chain-driven, so there are no concerns about missed or overdue cambelt changes.

THE CCW VIEW

Don't be put off by the lack of service history because the recorded mileage is backed up by the MoT history and the car's excellent overall condition. It looks great inside and out, and drives even better. The asking price is at the upper end of the range for this sort of car, but commensurate with the condition.

David Milloy

- ✓ PROS Excellent overall condition, low mileage
- ✗ CONS Lack of service history, not the cheapest R129

Typically massive wheel dominates clean interior.

Disappointing history is one of very few drawbacks.

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO DRIVE?

The first turn of the ignition and full choke result in an immediate start-up and the engine settles within a minute. Light steering allows for easy extraction from its parking bay and first impressions are promising thanks to low clutch engagement and smooth gear selection. Performance around town is sprightly, steering is responsive with minimal play and ample feedback and the suspension copes with all but the roughest surfaces. The brakes do not require a heavy foot, a firm, high pedal assures confidence and the handling feels assured.

BODYWORK CHECK

There are few issues with the bright Carmine Red paint. There's one small touch-in to the rear of the front panel, plus a tiny blemish on the offside front wing. The panel gaps are even and an inspection of the underside reveals good floors that are solid and well-protected, courtesy of the 2009 restoration. Chrome is good all round, the bumpers show little wear and the wheels have been improved with fresh paint plus new caps and trims. The glass is clear with recent window rubbers while the supplying dealer (Kelvedon) sticker remains in the rear window. The front grille, lights and lenses are clean and the tyres new.

HOW'S THE INTERIOR?

The car's first owner specified rear belts plus reclining front seats back in 1976. Four decades later those front seats are still in good order. The brown carpet has faded slightly around the gearstick but hasn't worn badly in the footwells. The roof lining has collected a few marks but remains taught and undamaged. There is a tiny tear in the front edge of the rear seat base and the door cappings are slightly sun-faded but the dashboard's wood veneer finish is factory fresh and all the dials and switches operate correctly.

UNDER THE BONNET

There's a fair amount of road grime under here, but this should clean easily. Fresh silver paint has been applied to the rocker cover and the engine block shows no evidence of oil or coolant leaks. Electronic ignition wiring is well hidden and the BL factory stickers look very 'period'. The history file is comprehensive, detailing two long-term owners over 32 years with MoTs dating back to 1983. Invoices detail replacement parts that recently included an alternator, wiper motor and radiator, plus a brake overhaul and new petrol tank.

THE CCW VIEW

This example has been spoilt, especially over the past 20 years. The well-sorted drivetrain, solid shell and bright paint stand out – it's perfect for a newcomer to the classic scene, who could look to revive some faded interior trim and tidy the engine bay before enjoying all the attention at a local show.

Grant Ford

- ✓ PROS Cosseted, clean and solid, price

1990 VOLVO 740GL

ENGINE 1986cc/4-cyl/OHC POWER 112bhp@5400rpm TORQUE 116lb ft@3750rpm
MAXIMUM SPEED 114 mph 0-60MPH 10sec FUEL CONSUMPTION 22-28mpg
TRANSMISSION RWD, four-speed auto MoT 12 months from sale ODOMETER 117,345 miles

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO DRIVE?

The car looks enormous with a seemingly bus-sized expanse behind you as it goes smoothly through its gears. It's quite high-g geared and cruises extremely well. It feels refined and not too thrashy at the legal limit. The power-assisted steering feels light but positive and the car takes corners well enough without major body roll. This is a heavy beast, but performance is more than adequate. The brakes are excellent – smooth, positive and powerful.

BODYWORK Expert welding underneath

INTERIOR Good overall, bar a couple of minor issues

MECHANICALS Smooth and refined throughout and does nothing to suggest that the bodywork won't stand up to many more years of use.

of the dashboard, presumably where something was once attached, though all the instruments seem to work.

UNDER THE BONNET

Everything looks well-maintained in this extremely clean engine bay – there's hardly a speck of surface rust anywhere and the four-pot looks as good as it sounds. All the levels are topped up properly and all visible leads and wiring look immaculate.

THE CCW VIEW

Volvo 740s were famously built to last and this one remains in very good overall condition. It may be a relatively low-spec model, but it's very comfortable and a pleasure to drive. It's perhaps not an obvious candidate to spend the £2995 sitting in your classic piggy bank on, but it's definitely a flexible one. It could do a 250-mile motorway trip one day and spend the next transporting someone's wardrobe before attracting an increasing amount of interest at weekend classic car shows. All bases covered for less than £3000...

Nick Larkin

BODYWORK CHECK

This car is in generally good order. A couple of minor welding repairs underneath have been well executed and there isn't so much as a jot of rust. The sills and door bottoms are excellent and there's no rot around the wheelarches. The radiator grille and other limited chrome are unmarked, the wheel trims and tyres are good, with plenty of tread on the latter and there are no cracks in the bumpers. The tailgate is free from corrosion and opens and closes precisely with a reassuring clunk. Overall, this car feels extremely well built

HOW'S THE INTERIOR?

Everything, from the seats to the chunky and precise gear selector and indicator switch, seems chunky and built to last. All has survived well, as has the headlining, which hasn't sagged, but there are a few cracks in the plastic trim on the driver's door. The excellent Blaupunkt stereo is obviously a more recent fitment and as you might expect from a Swedish car, the heating system works well, clearing moisture from the windscreen with indecent haste. The rear seats fold as they should and the loading area is undamaged. There is a small abrasion on top

- ✓ PROS No rot, good value, potential daily-driver
- ✗ CONS Cracked interior door trim, low spec

There's little to criticise in the austere, but solid interior.

Tidy engine bay appears to have been well looked-after.

EPIC BATTLES FORD SIERRA VS VAUXHALL CAVALIER VS AUSTIN MONTEGO

REP PERFORMANCE

Cavalier, Sierra and Montego - bywords for the cars that powered Britain's motorway-tramping salesmen in the 1980s. Nick Larkin puts them to the test

JOHN CORRETT 1985 AUSTIN MONTEGO 1.6L
 After years of Ford's domination of the company car market, Vauxhall executives found themselves with a market-leading product in the form of the Cavalier Mk1. From the moment the first example rolled off the production line on 27 August 1981, it was the middle-market sedan to beat. UK, it was a cleverly designed and engineered Opel Astra in disguise. Its makers seemed they belatedly had the technology and expertise to make a car that was as good as the more established Ford Sierra. Although it was the first mid-size sedan to be produced, rather than parked, it was the first to be marketed as such. The design was a mix of the old and the new, with a boxy front end and a more rounded rear. The car was a cleverly designed and engineered Opel Astra in disguise. Its makers seemed they belatedly had the technology and expertise to make a car that was as good as the more established Ford Sierra.

SEAN GREENWOOD 1985 FORD SIERRA 1.6L
 Sean spotted the 4000-mile Sierra for sale online, with 100,000 miles. The car had been in the hands of a former owner who had used it as a company car. The car was in excellent condition, with a full service history and a new engine. The car was a cleverly designed and engineered Opel Astra in disguise. Its makers seemed they belatedly had the technology and expertise to make a car that was as good as the more established Ford Sierra.

JOHN JONES 1985 VAUXHALL CAVALIER GLS
 John owned a 1985 Cavalier since 1981. The car was in excellent condition, with a full service history and a new engine. The car was a cleverly designed and engineered Opel Astra in disguise. Its makers seemed they belatedly had the technology and expertise to make a car that was as good as the more established Ford Sierra.

DRIVEN 1985 FORD CAPRI TICKFORD V 1988 PORSCHE 944 TURBO

TURBO TUSSLE

A lot has changed in three decades, with explosive price rises for fast Fords and fresh appreciation for transverse Porsches. The Capri and 944 may be rivals, but which of their range-toppers is best?

ON THE ROAD
 The Capri can't help but be a headliner in the classic car world. With its sleek lines and powerful engine, it's a car that's always been a headliner. The Porsche 944 Turbo, on the other hand, is a car that's always been a headliner. The Capri and 944 may be rivals, but which of their range-toppers is best?

EXCEEDING EXPECTATIONS
 As the 1980s rolled on, the Capri's reputation for being a headliner in the classic car world grew. The Porsche 944 Turbo, on the other hand, is a car that's always been a headliner. The Capri and 944 may be rivals, but which of their range-toppers is best?

THE WAY WE WERE

AUTUMN 1989

HASTINGS, EAST SUSSEX

Not 1066 but 1989, and a Battle of Hastings is still being enacted – even if it's just to find a parking space...

The grumpy-looking seagull on the right of our picture looks down from his lofty chimney perch at this tremendous 1989 panorama of motor vehicles in Hastings. 'Some of the cars here are rare even today and any survivors would be much coveted 30 years from now,' he was (probably) thinking. Actually, he was more likely to be thinking: 'Time to leave my calling card on that silver Maestro.'

Where do we begin with this lot? Well, the parked row to the left of our picture begins with a red Ford Escort van MkIII, a Nissan Sunny, Renault 21 hatchback (find one of those today!), then a Ford Sierra Sapphire, a Mitsubishi Shogun and – we think – an orange Datsun Violet.

Passing this line-up are two Ford Escorts – a grey MkIV and a yellow MkII – and a white example of that excellent Ryton-built alternative to the Ford Sierra and Vauxhall Cavalier, the Peugeot 405.

Approaching the zebra crossing are an E30 BMW 3 Series and a Vauxhall Cavalier Sports hatch, with a Ford Fiesta MkII and – again, we think – a B210 Datsun 120Y estate chasing a Vauxhall Astra MkII.

Is the dark blue car passing the parked Range Rover a Triumph Acclaim? The gentleman vaulting the central reservation appears to be trying to escape from it!

Let's cross the road ourselves to admire the line-up of parked cars facing the cameras, beginning with two Ford Sierras (one of which, inexplicably, appears to have a black vinyl roof). It's almost impossible to identify the cars behind the Ford siblings and we can't be sure whether that's a Fiat Uno in the layby further up the road or a Lancia Y10. That's almost certainly another Vauxhall Astra MkII behind it, though, and there's no mistaking the yellow Austin Metro, silver Ford Sierra, green Opel Ascona and – probably the oldest car here – the white Renault 12 further back.

Even further down the road can be seen a Bedford CF2 motorhome, the joyous expanse of a Nissan Prairie, a white VW Golf MkI (possibly a Clipper) and a yellow Volvo 145.

Driving towards us are a Mercedes W123 estate (S123 if you want to be pedantic about it), with a trio of Peugeots (309, 305 – largely forgotten today despite sales of 1.7 million from 1977-88 – and 205) just ahead. That's a Nissan Micra (the Japanese-built K10 facelift version) closer to the camera, plus yet another Astra MkII and a sunroof-equipped Austin Maestro.

A peek at the parked line-up to the right of the London Trader pub (which is still with us today) reveals such joys as a beige (though it might be gold) Ford Cortina 80 and, facing us, a Volkswagen Golf MkII sporting a rather angry-looking aftermarket quad-headlamp front-end.

NICK LARKIN

A legend in his own bus timetable, Nick contributed issue one of CCW back in May 1990. Rumour has it he's seen every episode of On the Buses.

Cars apart, this scene hasn't really changed enormously in 30 years, though the Corner House Restaurant is now the Two Bulls Steakhouse. The Cutter pub, dating back to 1769, is still going and The Seagull Restaurant remains in flight.

Hastings Pier has had something of a mixed history and 1989 would have been the last complete year in which you could have visited the famous 1872 structure before a storm inflicted severe damage on it the following year.

The pier was then virtually destroyed by fire in 2010 before finally re-opening in April 2016.

The huge white building in the background is Marine Court, a Modernist construction built to resemble an ocean liner and opened in 1938. It's now Grade II listed.

Maybe the few surviving examples of some of the cars here should also be listed due to their rarity, but maybe not, in some cases, for their architectural merit...

COV CLASSIC

The Peugeot 405 was an excellent all-rounder in the UK fleet market. Saloons were built in Coventry.

SPOILERS

Ford Escort MkII in yellow, complete with small boot spoiler would be a much sought-after car today.

LOSE YOURSELF IN 1989

CORRIE MILESTONES

ITV screened the 300th edition of Granada's Coronation Street, which first aired in 1960. The programme also attracted its biggest ever audience as 27m people watched villainous Alan Bradley, played by Mark Eden, get fatally run over by a Blackpool tram.

HILLSBOROUGH DISASTER

The Hillsborough disaster killed 96 Liverpool supporters in a crowd crush at the Sheffield stadium. More and more people had been ushered into penned-in standing areas and a barrier gave way. Inquests re-examining the case in 2014-16 returned verdicts of unlawful killing.

BATMAN RETURNS

Batman made his screen return in the dark film version of 1989 starring Michael Keaton as Bruce Wayne/Batman and directed by Tim Burton, with Jack Nicholson playing a particularly memorable Joker. The film went on to gross $411m.

CAR OF 1989 LAND ROVER DISCOVERY

A legend began on 1989 with the introduction of the first Land Rover Discovery, designed to fill a gap between the Range Rover and Ninety/One Ten. Based on a Range Rover chassis and drivetrain, some say the newcomer was even better off-road. It was certainly a lot cheaper to buy.

The price differential was partly due to the use of items such as switchgear and instruments from other models in the Austin Rover range in its earlier manifestations, including Morris Marina door handles.

Engine choices were initially a 3258cc V8 or 3495cc diesel. A four-door Discovery arrived in 1990, and the range was refreshed in 1992, when an automatic version became available.

The current third-generation L462 Discovery went on sale in the UK in February 2017.

LONG GONE

Peugeot 305 was a front-wheel-drive saloon and estate which sold extremely well, but is virtually extinct today.

ALL THE 3s

BMW 3 Series will be forever associated with 1980s 'Yuppies', but was miles better than most of its rivals.

ALL-ROUND

The Austin Maestro, launched in 1982, had established itself as a relatively reliable useful all-rounder by 1989.
